PREFACE.

THE Members of the Camden Society are indebted to Mrs. Everett Green for the publication of the interesting letters printed on the following pages. In pursuing her labours at the State Paper Office, the valuable fruits of which we have received in four rich volumes, she discovered these documents, and brought them into the series of Domestic Correspondence from the various incongruous places in which they were deposited, and, knowing that I am engaged in preparing a memoir of the writer, she kindly introduced them to my notice. Of Lord Carew himself, however, they afford very scanty information. It is not a little singular that in relating all the gossip, both public and private, he could from day to day collect, he mentions himself, directly, once only. This was on the occasion of his being sworn a Member of the Privy Council, and, in communicating the event to his friend, with the marked humility frequently observed in men of such eminence, he requests his prayers, in the words of the Litany, "that it may please God to send him grace, wisdom, and understanding." If however in this particular the letters are deficient, they throw very considerable light upon the period to which they relate, and reveal to us numerous facts and the dates of many events not elsewhere found.

In England, fortunately, during this period no very exciting transactions occurred, if we except the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, which caused no little stir. The events which took place abroad, however, were of greater interest as affecting the world at large. In France the jealousies of the royal family, superadded to the religious dissensions which prevailed, rent the country from the English Channel to the Mediterranean Sea, and led to a war in which the King was arrayed against the Princes and the Princes against the King. The sacrifice of the life of the Marshal d'Anere by order of Louis partially healed the quarrel, but it soon broke out again with increased fury, and led to a civil war, which was only quelled after an enormous expenditure of blood and treasure. Italy, as usual, was a battle-field. The plains of Piedmont and Milan were wasted by war in consequence of the struggles of the houses of Austria and Savoy for the possession of Monferrat. In the Netherlands great distractions prevailed on account of religious differences between the Protestant sects, especially the Lutherans and Calvinists, who hated each other little less than they hated the Pope. Upon all these matters the Lord Carew seems to have been exceedingly well informed, and he communicated to his friend the intelligence he possessed with very little reserve, considering the habitual caution of an experienced courtier of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. This caution is manifested in several places by a request that his letters may be burnt, and in his last communication this request is reiterated in a postscript, to the effect that they might be so destroyed or returned to him. Fortunately, as is usual in such cases, the request was disregarded, and the letters are preserved to us.

Upon perusing these letters and observing the great historical interest which they possess, I considered them well worth publication, and, having submitted them to the Council of the Camden Society with an offer to edit them for the Society, the Council was pleased to accept my proposal. In the execution of this trust I have endeavoured to adhere as closely as possible to the original orthography, except that, in accordance with the practice of the Society, words which in the original are contracted are printed in full. I have further added such foot-notes as appeared to be desirable in illustration of the text. In preparing the Index, where a name occurs more than once on the same page I have not repeated the reference.

As the papers have been prepared for the press in the intervals of business of an engrossing nature, I am conscious that several errors will be noticed by the reader. In respect to such I must bespeak his favourable indulgence.

Having said thus much of the letters, I will add a few words respecting the writer and the person to whom they were addressed. Both these men were too eminent in their own day and are too well known in ours to require much to be written concerning them.

GEORGE LORD CAREW was the second son of Dr. George Carew, who held the deanery of Windsor and other preferments in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He was born in 1557, and entered the University of Oxford in 1572, but left without taking a degree. He distinguished himself at an early age in the Irish wars, and in 1585 received the honour of knighthood from the Lord Deputy. Having written a treatise on the condition of Ireland, which showed a consummate knowledge of the state of the country, the Queen, when the whole of Ireland was in a state of revolt after the failure of the expedition of the Earl of Essex, made choice of him as Lord President of Munster. His conduct in this office fully justified her Majesty's confidence in his integrity, capacity, and judgment; for the suppression of the rebellion was chiefly owing to his valour in the field and his wisdom in the council. By James I. he was no less esteemed. On the accession of that monarch he was created Baron Carew of Clopton, and made Vice-Chamberlain to the Queen and Receiver-General of her revenues. Moreover, on the death of the Earl of Devonshire the office of Master of the Ordnance was granted to him for life. He held these offices at the date of this correspondence; and, being constantly resident at Court, he was well informed on all passing subjects of interest.

After the death of Queen Anne he became Chamberlain to the Prince of Wales, whose good graces also he secured. On the Prince's accession to the throne he was advanced, for his long and meritorious services, to the dignity of Earl of Totnes. He died at his house in the Savoy 1629. Lord Carew was a man of learning and ability, and was much attached to antiquarian pursuits, particularly genealogy. There are in the Lambeth library numerous valuable pedigrees, generally of Irish families, in his hand-writing. He was an intimate friend of Camden, whom he assisted in preparing the "Britannia."

Sir Thomas Roe was no less eminent as a diplomatist than the Lord Carew as a soldier. He was descended from a family originally seated in Kent, and was the son of Robert Roe, of Lower Layton, Essex, and grandson of Sir Thomas Roe, Lord Mayor of London in 1568. He was born about 1580, and studied at Magdalen College, Oxford, but left without attaining his degree. He received the honour of knighthood in 1604, but his first public employment of importance was his mission to the Great Mogul in 1614, on which occasion these letters were written. The object of this embassy was to promote the extension of trade in the East, and the expenses were paid by the East India Company.^a Sir Thomas succeeded most satisfactorily. Our Indian empire owes much to the treaties which he established, and he gained great and deserved credit from his employment. He arrived at Adsmere, where the Mogul resided, on the 22nd December, 1615, and was met, he says, by Mr. Edwards, the resident agent of the East India Company, "accompanied with the famous unwearied walker, Thomas Coryatt, who on foote had passed most of Europe and Asya, and was now arrived in India, being but the beginning of his purposed travells." Roe's original journal of this embassy is preserved in the British Museum.^a In it he gives an interesting account of the Mogul empire, the customs of the Court, and the manners of the inhabitants. Sir Thomas Roe's next embassy was in 1621, when he was sent to the Court of Constantinople with very much the same object as his mission to India. He remained until 1628; and, by his prudence and sagacity, succeeded in obtaining the most valuable results, not only for the extension of trade, but even for the Christian religion itself. His letters and negociations relating to this embassy were published in 1740 in one volume folio by Samuel Richardson, the expense being partially borne by the "Society for the Encouragement of Learning."^b This volume was edited by Carte the historian, from whom there is a very interesting letter dated 20 March, 1736-7,^c addressed to the secretary to the Society, relative to the publication of these and the rest of Roe's papers, which were all at that time the property of Richardson.^a It appears that "from the time of his being sent to Constantinople there was a continued series of his letters and negociations till the end of his life." Carte carefully examined the documents, and he gives his opinion as to what portion of them it was desirable to publish, and the manner of such publication. He estimated that, by retrenching letters containing the same accounts, and those of compliments, the work might be embraced in two volumes folio in addition to the Turkish negociations, unless it were determined to print also translations of such letters as were written in German or Italian, of which there were a great number; in which case an additional volume would, he thought, be necessary. The first volume, containing the Turkish negociations, was the only one published.

^a Addit. MSS. 6115.

All the papers appear to have been carefully arranged for publication, but the printing of the second volume was delayed in consequence of Carte's absence from England,^b and finally abandoned upon the dissolution of the Society in 1749. What has become of these documents is a question of considerable interest. Carte specifically mentions the four letters printed in this volume as being with Roe's papers. He says, "There are also 4 long letters of the Earl of Totnes to him during that embassy, containing a journal of occurrences, as well in England as in other partes of Europe, from

^a Addit. MSS. 6185. 111.

^b Addit. MSS. 6185. 103.

1615 to 1617, which, containing short memorials of facte, like Cambden's summary of King James' Reign, may by some be thought as curious." As these letters were found in the State Paper Office it would naturally be concluded that the bulk of the correspondence would be discovered there also; and there is, certainly, in that repository a great mass of Roe's papers, and these were formerly tied up in separate bundles, but some years ago were distributed among the various collections to which they belong, according to the system of arrangement which obtains in the office. It appears from Carte's letter that he marked many of the papers which passed through his hands. I have, however, examined a considerable quantity, and cannot find one letter bearing any peculiar mark. Many of the documents in the printed volume are found here, but counterparts might have been used for publication. There is also a memorandum in existence which shows that a volume of Sir Thomas Roe's Correspondence had been lent to the Earl of Oxford. This volume now forms No. 1901 of the Harleian Collection in the British Museum, and contains letters written by Sir Thomas Roe only, whilst in the bundles of the correspondence for the same period letters to him alone are found. Were it not for the discovery of Lord Carew's letters in the State Paper Office I should conclude that Richardson's papers might be still in private hands; but, if such be the case, how got these letters among the national archives?

But to return from this digression.

In 1629 Sir Thomas Roe was sent ambassador to Poland and Sweden, and on his way treated with the King of Denmark, as also on his return. Advantage was taken of this occasion to endeavour the reconciliation of the Lutherans and Calvinists, and unite them all in conformity with the Church of England. Although this last matter failed, great advantages to trade and commerce were obtained through his negotiations.

In 1641 he was sent ambassador to the emperor and the princes of Germany to be present at the Diet of Ratisbon, and there to mediate on behalf of the Prince Elector Palatine. The Emperor was so pleased with his conduct and his great abilities that he several times said in public: "I have met with many gallant persons of many nations, but I scarce ever met with an ambassador till now." On his return from Germany he was made Chancellor of the Garter and a Privy Councillor, but he lived not long to enjoy these honours. He died 6th November, 1644.

Sir Thomas Roe was undoubtedly a man of great parts—a scholar, a gentleman, and a courtier. Carte, speaking of his letters and papers, says: "I have read them with great pleasure, and cannot sufficiently admire his rare abilities, judgment, and integrity, his extraordinary sagacity in discovering the views and designs of those with whom he treated, and his admirable dexterity in guarding against their measures and bringing them over to his purpose. Wise, experienced, penetrating, and knowing, he was never to be surprised or deceived, and though no minister ever had greater difficulties to struggle with, or was employed by a Court that had less power to support him, yet he supported all his employments with dignity, and came out of them with reputation and honour. In all the honest arts of negociation he had few equals, (I dare say) no superiors. His letters and papers are a treasure that ought to be communicated to the world."

LETTERS OF GEORGE LORD CAREW.

LETTER I.^a

MY LORD AMBASSADOR:—To geve you testimonie I am nott vn- A.D. 1615.
myndfull of my promesse, to lett you know in thatt remote part of the world where you live how things passe in these partes, I send you this ensuinge rapsodie of thinges past. In Januarie last the Earl of January.
Kent ^b died; his old brother, to the knees in the grave, livethe, and my Ladie Elizabeth Grey is but yett the Ladie Ruthen. Sir Moyle Finche ^c is also dead; his wife, pressed with suters, being, as I take itt,

^a S.P.O. Dom. Corr. vol. lxxx. 85.

^b Henry Grey, called 7th Earl of Kent. Richard, the third Earl, having greatly wasted his estate by gaming, died at an inn in Lombard Street. The right to the Earldom devolved upon his half-brother, Henry Grey, who abstained from assuming the title because he had not sufficient property to maintain its dignity. His only son, Henry Grey, for the same reason as his father, declined the title, but he left three sons who were successively Earls of Kent: viz., Reginald, who by the exercise of great frugality nearly recovered the paternal estate, and re-assumed the honours of the family. On his death s.p. in 1572, he was succeeded by the nobleman mentioned in the text, who also died s.p., aged 74 years, and was buried at Flitton, co. Bedford. He was succeeded by his brother Charles, who survived till 1623, notwithstanding he is at this time stated to be "to the knees in the grave." The Lady Elizabeth Grey here alluded to was the second daughter and sole heir of Gilbert Earl of Shrewsbury, and wife of Henry Grey de Ruthyn, son and successor of Charles the 8th Earl of Kent, whose protracted life at this time disappointed the ambition with which she looked forward to become Countess of Kent. Her husband succeeded his father in 1623, and died s.p. 1639.

^c Sir Moyle Finch, of Eastwell, co. Kent, created a Baronet in 1611, married Elizabeth, only daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Heneage, of Copt Hall, Essex. Lady Finch survived her husband several years, and rejected all her suitors. In 1623 she was raised to the peerage as Viscountess Maidstone, and five years afterwards was advanced to the dignity of Countess of Winchelsea. She died in 1633. Chamberlain says that Sir Moyle Finch left his eldest son but 100*l.* a year more than he had before, during his mother's life.—(Birch's Court and Times of James I., vol. i. 356.)

the richest widow in present estate, both in ioynture, moveables, and inheritance of her owne, thatt is in England. The Lord Beawchampe^a hath a sonne borne, to the great comforte of old Hertford.

February.

In Februarye Sir Thomas Cheeke's wife^b died. Mr. John Dvn^c is a Minister, the King's Chaplaine, and a Doctor of Divinitie. Martiall La Chastre^d in France is dead, and Monsieur de Requelarre^e

^a Edward Lord Beauchamp, son of the Earl of Hertford, did not live until 1618, as stated in all the printed books on the subject, and also in the pedigree recorded in the Heralds' College, but died in 1612, as proved by the following entry under that year in the Burial Register of Great Bedwyn, co. Wilts: "On tuesday the one and twentyeth of July an^o predicto was heere entombed the body of the right ho^{ble} Edward Lord Beauchampe who deceased at Week." The Lord Beauchamp mentioned in the text, therefore, was the grandson of the Earl of Hertford, and the child whose birth is chronicled was Edward, the old Earl's great-grandson. We can quite understand the "great comfort" it must have been to him to witness the birth of an heir in the fourth generation. His hopes, however, were soon blighted, for both this child and his father died before the Earl, who, in 1621, was succeeded in his honours by his grandson Sir William Seymour, in whom the Dukedom of Somerset was restored in 1660.

^b She was the daughter of Peter Osborne, Esq. and wife of Sir Thomas Cheke, grand-son of Sir John Cheke, tutor to King Edward VI. Chamberlain says, "She would needs be let blood for a little heat or itching in the arm, but by mistake the Queen's surgeon pricked her arm too deep, and cut an artery, which fell to rangle, and in a few days grew to a gangrene, whereof she died, and was buried at night with above thirty coaches and much torch-light attending her;" which, he adds, "is of late come much into fashion, as it would seem to avoid trouble and charge."—Birch, vol. i. 296.

^c John Donne, the poet. Chamberlain says, "John Donne and one Cheke went out doctors at Cambridge, with much ado, after our coming away, by the King's express mandate; though the Vice-chancellor and some other of the heads called them openly filios noctis et tenebrionis, that sought thus to come in at the window when there was a fair gate open."—Birch, vol. i. 306.

^d Claude de Châtre, eldest son of Claude de Châtre, by Anne Robertetz, his wife, was Seigneur and Baron of Maisonfort, Governor of Orleans, and Captain of the Tower of Bourges. Died 14 December, 1614, aged about 78 years.—Anselme.

^e Antoine Seigneur de Roquelaure, in Armagnac, of Gaudoux, &c. Seneschal, and Governor of Rouergue and Foix. At first he was known as the Seigneur de Longart, and was in great favour with Jeanne d'Albret, Queen of Navarre. She engaged him in the service of her son the King of Navarre, and gave him the share which she had in the Seigneurie of Roquelaure. He was Master of the Wardrobe in 1589, Knight of the Orders in 1595. He was also Lieutenant of Haute Auvergne, and Captain of Fontainebleau, and was created Marshal of France 1615. Died 9 June, 1625.—Anselme, vii. 401, 406.

substituted in his roome. Monsieur de Silerie ^a is gone into Spayne to consummatt the mariage of the King his master, ^b but the event is very doubtfull, the Frenche princes beinge so opposite vnto it. The assembye of the three Estates is dissolved, and as in our parliment, so in thatt, nothing was concluded, and France is divided into so great factions as troubles is expected.

The Erle of Orkney, ^c in Scotland, is beheaded, his lands and honnour excheated to the kinge. Sir Arthur Ingram ^d was sworne Coferer of the king's house, but the officers of the householld have so stronglie opposed against a stranger, contrarye to the custome of the house, as they have prevayled to have him removed, which must be effected att Michælnas next; in the meane tyme Sir Marmaduke Darrel ^e hathe the board, and executes the office, and shall be coferer.

Marche. Queene Margerett, ^f the last of the Royal familie of Valois, March.

^a Pierre Brulart, son of Nicolas Brulart, Marquis of Sillery and Chancellor of France, and of Claudia Prudhomme, his wife. He was made Secretary of State on the resignation of Nicolas de Neufville, 4th March, 1606, and Councillor of State 1st January, 1607, taking the oath the 27th Nov. following. He was nominated Ambassador to the Court of Spain in 1612, and died 22 April, 1640, aged 57.—Anselme, vi. 527.

^b Louis XIII. with Anne of Austria, eldest daughter of Philip III.

^c Patrick Stuart, 2nd Earl, son of Robert Stuart, natural son of King James V. created Earl of Orkney 1581. Patrick Lord Grey, in 1609, writes to Lord Salisbury, that his brother the Earl of Orkney has been committed, through the malice of his own servants, for informalities in the government of his own state; begs that his oversight may be attributed rather to simplicity than malice.—S.P.O. Dom. Corr. vol. xlvi. p. 14. Patrick, 7th Lord Grey, married the sister of the Earl alluded to in the text.

^d Sir Arthur Ingram, a wealthy citizen of London, knighted 1612. He purchased the manor of Temple Newsome, co. York, and was sheriff of that county 1619. From him descended Sir Henry Ingram, created in 1661 Baron Ingram of Irvine, and Viscount Irvine, of the county of Ayr.

^e Sir Marmaduke Darrell, of Fulmere, co. Bucks. He was also Surveyor-General of Victuals for the Navy, in which office he was succeeded by his son Sir Sampson Darrell.—Add. MSS. 14,311. 286.

^f Margaret of Valois, descended from Philip VI. King of France, to whose grandfather the county of Valois had been given as an apanage in 1285, by Philip the Hardy. Margaret was the last descendant of this great house, which had given kings to France from 1328. She was born in 1552, married Henry of Navarre 1572, who became King of France on the death of her brother Henry III. in 1598. From him she was divorced in 1599.

died in Marche, and she made the Kinge of France her heyre of all the lands which her mother the old queene ^a had purchased for her; most of her moveables she bestowed vpon one of her favorites.

The Ladie Haddington,^b the Countesse Mongomerye,^c and the Ladie Rodney,^d are latelye mothers of yonge borne daughters. The Earl of Tomond^e is lord president of Mounster, and the Lord Danvers^f consented therevnto. Sir Robert Drewrie^g is dead, and

^a Catherine de' Medici, daughter of Lorenzo Duke of Florence, and Queen of Henry II. She died 1589, aged 70.

^b The Lady Haddington was Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Ratcliffe, Earl of Sussex, and wife of John Ramsey, Viscount Haddington. He had been instrumental in the escape of James from the Gowrie conspiracy. Great festivities took place at their marriage in 1608. The King himself gave away the bride, and afterwards there was a grand masque and a banquet, in the midst of which the King "drank a carouse in a cup of gold, which he sent to the bride, together with a bason and ewer, two livery pots, and three standing cups, all very fair and massive of silver and gilt, and withall a patent for a pension of 600*l.* a-year to the longest liver of them; with this message, 'that he wished them so much comfort all their lives as he received that day the bridegroom delivered him from the danger of Gowrie.'"—Birch, vol. i. 73. In 1620 the Viscount Haddington was created Baron of Kingston-upon-Thames and Earl of Holderness. He died 1625, s. p.

^c Susan, daughter of Edward Vere, sixteenth Earl of Oxford, married 4 Jan. 1604-5, to Philip Herbert, created a Knight of the Bath at the coronation of James I., and Earl of Montgomery shortly afterwards. By his first wife, the lady mentioned in the text, he had seven sons and three daughters.

^d Frances, daughter of Sir Robert Southwell, of Woodrising, Norfolk, one of the Queen's maids of honour, was married on Shrove-sunday 1613-14 to Edward son and heir of Sir John Rodney, of Stoke Giffard, co. Somerset; and he was knighted at the Queen's palace of Somerset House on the 29th of May following. Lady Rodney was one of four ladies of the privy-chamber who, in the procession on the Queen's funeral, had, by "especial partialitie," places assigned them above Baronets' wives.—Nichols's Progresses of James I. ii. 755, iii. 541.

^e Donough O'Brien, fourth Earl, brought up in England, and much esteemed both by Queen Elizabeth and James I. He paid Lord Danvers a composition of 3,200*l.* for the office mentioned in the text, greatly to the prejudice of Sir Richard Morison, who had long before bought the reversion of it. Died 1624.

^f Sir Henry Danvers, created Baron Danvers of Dantsey 1603. He was afterwards Earl of Danby and K. G. Died 1643, s. p., aged 71. He was the founder of the physic garden at Oxford.

His three sisters were:—Frances, married first Sir Nicholas Clifford, Knight, and secondly Sir William Wray, of Glentworth, co. Lincoln, Knight, died s. p.; Elizabeth, married William Cecill, son and heir of William Earl of Exeter, died 1653, aged 80; Diana, married Sir Edward Cecill, Viscount Wimbledon.—(Addit. MSS. 19,127.) Chamberlain, speaking of the latter match in 1616, says that “since the death of her brother she had become a good marriage, worth 10,000*l.* or 12,000*l.*”—Birch, i. 444.

^a Sir Henry Drury, of Edgerly, co. Bucks, grandson of Sir Robert Drury of that place, second son of Sir Robert Drury the elder, of Hawsted, mentioned in the last note. Sir Henry, though heir male of the Knight now deceased, was eight degrees removed.

^b Clement Edmonds, son of Sir Thomas Edmonds. He received a grant of the office of Clerk of the Council for life 1609, was knighted 1617, and died 1622.

^c Maurice Abbot, son of a weaver at Guildford, an eminent London merchant, and Governor of the East India Company. He was the first person knighted by King Charles I., and was Lord Mayor 1638. Died 1640.

^d Probably Henry Middleton, to whom in 1604 a commission was granted, in conjunction with Christopher Coleshurst, to be Governor and Lieut.-General in a merchant voyage to the East Indies. ^b Sir Michael Stanhope, of Sudbury, co. Suffolk, knighted 1603. His daughter Jane was married to Henry Ratcliffe, called Lord Fitzwalter, son and heir of Robert fifth Earl of Sussex, in February 1614.

^c Catherine, daughter of Sir William Dormer, of Elthorpe, and widow of John 2nd Lord St. John of Bletshoe. She was buried in St. Michael's Chapel, at Westminster. Anne, their daughter and heir, married William Howard, eldest son of Sir Charles Howard, 1st Earl of Nottingham, and Baron Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England. Lord Effingham was summoned to Parliament, and died in the lifetime of his father. See also page 13.

Queen Anne. Here she became intimately associated with the Lord Carew; hence, as a term of endearment, he calls her his wife. She attended the Electress to Germany as Chief Lady of Honour, and the court gossips said that she accepted this office because she was not insensible to the attentions of Count de Schomberg. Her friends, however, for some time, opposed their union. Mr. Lorking, writing on the 13th June, 1614, says, "the news from Heidelberg is that Mrs. Anne Dudley is now made sure to M. Schomberg." —Birch, vol. i. p. 325. They were married, as stated in the text, and King James was not a little jealous of their combined influence over his daughter. Anne, however, died in her first confinement (p. 21), watched over and lamented by her kind-hearted mistress, who took charge of her infant son, Frederick, who accompanied the Prince of Orange to England, and was created Baron Tayes, Earl of Brentford, Marquis of Harwich, and Duke of Schomberg. He also held the office of Master of the Ordnance, but was killed at the battle of the Boyne. The titles became extinct in 1713.

^a Robert Bylot probably accompanied Henry Hudson's expedition in 1610, when the latter discovered the Bay which is called after his name; or that of Sir Thomas Button, in 1612. In the latter year Bylot himself discovered Fox Channel, between Cumberland Island and Southampton Island; and he, with Baffin, in 1614, penetrated through Davis's Straits to the most northern extremity, called Sir Thomas Smith's Sound (78° n. lat.)

^a Sir Julius Cæsar, eldest son of Cæsar Dalmatio, a Venetian, and Physician to Queens Mary and Elizabeth. Born 1557. Was Master of Requests, Judge of the Admiralty, and Master of St. Katharine's Hospital, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. On the accession of James I. he was knighted and made Treasurer of the Exchequer, sworn of the Privy Council, and created Master of the Rolls, which office he held until his death in 1636.

^b Anne and Mary, daughters of Sir Henry Wodehouse, of Wareham, co. Norfolk, by Anne, daughter of Sir Nicholas Bacon. Anne married first Henry Hogan of East Bradenham, co. Norfolk, by whom she had one son, Robert Hogan, who was an infant on the death of his father in 34th Elizabeth. Henry Hogan left all his lands in jointure to his wife. She obtained a grant of the wardship of her son, and, seeing that he was weakly and not likely to attain full age, on June 1st, 1613, he being still a minor and in extremity of sickness, she prevailed upon him by false representations to execute a conveyance in her favour, provided a fine of 10*l.* was not paid before the 1st September following. Robert died three weeks afterwards, but the transaction was concealed from the heirs until after the day was past on which the fine should have been paid, whereby the cousins and heirs of the deceased, Dame Anne Day and Thomas Downes, were disinherited. This gave rise to extensive legal proceedings, and to a petition to Parliament in 1621 for an Act to cancel the fine as illegal, and to give the heirs possession of the estates.—S.P.O. Dom. Corr. cxxi. 16-20. After the death of Henry Hogan his widow married William Hungate, of East Bradenham, co. Norfolk, and subsequently Sir Julius Cæsar, as in the text. Mary Wodehouse married Sir Robert Killigrew, of Hanworth. She is called the young Lady Killigrew, to distinguish her from the old Lady Killigrew, who married, in December 1616, Dr. George Downham, Bishop of Derry. She died the following year. Chamberlain calls her the French Lady Killigrew.—Birch, ii. pp. 41, 43. Another sister of these ladies married Mr. Hakewill, a lawyer.

^a John Hoskyns, of the Middle Temple, Member of Parliament for the city of Hereford, afterwards made a Serjeant and one of the Judges for Wales. Hoskyns had given offence to the King by his conduct in the House in the Session of 1614. Indeed so violent had been the proceedings, that upon the dissolution pursuivants were in attendance to warn divers members to appear at the Council Table on the following day. Mr. Hoskyns and others on the 8th June were sent to the Tower. A few days afterwards Dr. Sharp first, and Sir Charles Cornwallis afterwards, were also committed—the one for helping to compose Hoskyns' speech, and the other for animating him. Chamberlain says that "Hoskyns was embouched, abetted, and indeed plainly hired with money to do as he did."—Birch, vol. i. 324, 346.

^b Anne, daughter and coheir of Ferdinando Earl of Derby, wife of Grey Brydges, 5th Lord Chandos, who, notwithstanding her marriage with a Baron, obtained, in 1623, a special patent of precedency as an Earl's daughter. She had two daughters. The elder, Elizabeth, married the Earl of Castlehaven, and Anne, the younger, a gentleman of the name of Totteson.

^c Edmund Peacham, Rector of Hinton St. George, co. Somerset. As early as 1603 he was accused of uttering in a sermon seditious and railing words against the King, and more particularly against his Councillors, the Bishops, and Judges. In 1614 he was again in trouble. Upon being asked what he would give to the Benevolence upon the Princess's marriage, he answered that he would say with St. Peter, gold and silver he had none, but that he had he would give, which was his prayers for the King. He was committed to the Tower, and upon his papers being searched a sermon of a seditious and treasonable character was discovered. He died in Taunton gaol in 1614, and Chamberlain says, "he left behind him a most wicked and desperate writing, worse than that he was convicted for."—Birch, vol. i. p. 393.

^d Thomas Bilson, born 1574, Prebendary of Winchester 1576, Bishop of Worcester 1596, Bishop of Winchester 1597, died 1686. He took a very active part in the divorce of the Earl and Countess of Essex; hence his favour with Somerset.

^c Sir William Smith, of Hill Hall, co. Essex, (nephew of Sir Thomas Smith, Secretary of State in the reign of Edward VI.) knighted 1603. The Countess was confined to his care on the 26th Oct., and was, at first, confined at the Cockpit, but on the following day, for better accommodation and security, was removed to the Lord d'Aubigny's house at Blackfriars. On the 17th Nov. Sir William Smith reported that the Countess threatened her own life; that she, laying her hand on her belly, sayd, "If I were ridd of this burden, it is my death that is looked for, and my death they shall have." (S.P.O. Dom. Corr.) So well did Smith execute his office, that on the 15th May in the next year he was granted the office of Marshal of the King's Bench. (S.P.O. Grant Book.) He died 1620.

^d Lodovick Stuart, second Duke of Lennox. He was High Chamberlain and Admiral of Scotland, Ambassador to France 1601, created K.G. 1603, Baron Settringham and Earl of Richmond 1613, and Duke of Richmond 1623. He filled the offices of Lord Steward and First Gentleman of the Bedchamber. Died 1624, s. p.

George Moore^a made Lieutenant of the Tower, and the same day the Erle of Sommersett was sent prisoner to the Tower.

The 14. Mrs Turner was hanged att Tibourne for Overburies deathe.

The 16. Sir Gervais Elvishe was condemned as a principall in the poysoninge of Overburie, who cast many asperitions vppon the Erle, but more pregnantlye vppon the Countesse of Sommerset, and allso vppon the Erle of Northampton,^b and Sir Thomas Monson, who was then allso prisoner in an alderman's house^c for the same cause; and vppon the 20 day followinge he was hanged vppon a gibbett on the Tower hyll.

The 27. James Franklin (afore mentioned) was condemned for the poysoninge as aforesayed. He accused bothe the Erle and his ladie, but principallye the Countesse, and he forgott not Sir Thomas Monson.

Sir John Leedes^d and his wife, who is daughter to Sir Thomas Monson, for unreverent speeches of the Kinge, and speaking to muche of this poysoninge busines, were committed, but he was quicklye sett at libertie, but she remayned prisoner somme dayes after him.

Sir Thomas Challoner^e and the old Ladie Winsor^f are dead.

^a Sir George Moore, of Catteshall, co. Surrey, in right of which he claimed the office of Usher of the Chamber on the accession of James I. This claim, like many others of a similar nature, was left unexamined. (S.P.O. Dom. Corr. vol. ii. No. 76.) He was Chancellor of the Order of the Garter 1610-28, (Nicolas, Hist. of the Orders of Knighthood, vol. ii. 440,) and he held jointly with Sir Robert Moore the office of Constable of Farnham Castle. He was also Receiver-General in the Household of the Prince of Wales. He was a man of great abilities, and a frequent speaker in the House of Commons.

^b Henry Howard, created Baron Howard of Marnhill, and Earl of Northampton, 1604, K.G. A man of very bad character. He died at his mansion at Charing Cross (now Northumberland House), June 15, 1614, s. p., just early enough to avoid an ignominious end.

^c Sir John Swinnerton's. He was Sheriff of London 1603, at which time he was knighted. Lord Mayor 1612.

^d Sir John Leeds of Surrey, knighted 7th January, 1611. He was of the Sussex and Cambridge family of Leeds.

^e Sir Thomas Chaloner, of Gisborough, co. York, and Steeple Claydon, co. Bucks. A man of eminent abilities, who first introduced the manufacture of alum into this country.

^f Anne, daughter and coheir of Thomas Rivell, of Chippenham, co. Cambridge, esq., widow of Henry fifth Baron Windsor, of Stanwell.

President of Connaught from 1616 to his death in 1644. In 1620 he was created Viscount Wilmot of Athlone, and Henry, his son and successor, for his zealous and eminent services in the Royal cause during the Civil Wars, was in 1643 created Baron Wilmot in the English Peerage, and in 1652 Earl of Rochester.

^a William Howard, son and heir apparent of Charles first Earl of Nottingham. He married Anne, daughter and heir of John Lord St. John of Bletsoe, and left an only daughter, who married John, first Earl of Peterborough.

^b William, third Earl. His mother was "Sydney's sister." Elected K.G. 1603, made Governor of Portsmouth 1609. Chancellor of the University of Oxford 1617. Lord Chamberlain 1615-1625. Died 1630.

^c Sir Robert Cotton, founder of the Cottonian Library in the British Museum, the collection of which he commenced in 1588. A Commission was issued on the 20th October, 1615, to the Archbishop of Canterbury and others, to seize his person and examine his papers, upon the ground of his having amassed together divers secrets of state, and communicated them to the Spanish Ambassador. (Birch, vol. i. p. 371.) Sir Robert Cotton was knighted 1603, and created a Baronet 1611. Died 1631, aged 60.

^d See note ^d, p. 6.

^e Wife of Archibald Campbell, seventh Earl of Argyle. According to Douglas he was twice married, first to Anne Douglas, daughter of the Earl of Morton, by whom he had one son, Archibald, who succeeded him, and four daughters; and secondly to Anne, daughter of Sir William Cornwallis, of Brome, by whom he had one son, James, created in 1622 Lord Kintyre, and in 1642 Earl of Irvine. This double birth is not mentioned in Douglas's Peerage of Scotland.

^f Edward Somerset, fourth Earl, K.G. 1593. He was Master of the Horse 1602-15. Lord Privy Seal 1615-27. Died 1628.

A.D. 1616.
January.

Januarye.—The Erle of Worcester the 2 day of this monethe surrendered his office of Master of the Horse to the King, in lieu whereof he was made Lord Privye Seal, and allso a larger pention was given vnto him,

The 3. Sir George Villers was made Master of the Horse, and the same day (as I take itt) Sir Thomas Lake ^a was ioyned principall Secretarye with Sir Ralph Winwood.^b

^a Sir Thomas Lake, of Canons, co. Middlesex, knighted 1603, being then Clerk of the Signet, made Privy Councillor 1614.

^b Sir Ralph Winwood, born 1565, at Aynhoe, co. Northampton, knighted 1607, and sent Ambassador to Holland. Made Secretary of State 1614, died 1617.

^c Penelope Spencer, eldest daughter of Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, and wife of Sir William Spencer, eldest son and successor (1627) of Robert first Lord Spencer of Wormleighton. She did not die at this time, but survived her husband, who expired 1636, thirty-one years, leaving a high character for all female virtues. She was buried at Brington 16th July, 1667, where a monument to her memory yet remains.

^d Sir Roger Dallison, of Laughton, co. Lincoln, was Sheriff of that county 1601, knighted 1603, made Surveyor of the Ordnance for life 1606, upon the surrender of which office he was made Lieutenant of the Ordnance for life in 1608. Created a Baronet 1611.

^e Sir Richard Moryson, of Tooley Park, co. Leicester. He first distinguished himself in the wars in the Low Countries, where, at 18 years of age, he was made the Captain of a company, which company he held until his death. He accompanied the Earl of Essex to Ireland, where he served with great credit, and was knighted in August 1599. He became successively Governor of Dundalk, Lecale, Waterford, and the town and county of Wexford. On the death of Sir Henry Brounker, in 1607, he was joined in a commission with the Earl of Thomond to execute the office of Lord President of Munster, which he held until the Lord Danvers was appointed, under whom he served as Vice-President. (Lamb. MSS. 619, 131.) He is said to have paid the Lord Danvers 3,000*l.* for the reversion of this office, (Birch, i. 167), and that he agreed to do so would seem to be confirmed by the MS. above quoted, which is a petition to the King to allow the Lord Danvers to resign in his favour. The Earl of Thomond appears, however, to have been a better bidder, (see note c, p. 4,) and accordingly obtained the appointment.

Deputie of Irland, ^a and in his roome the Lord Chauncelor and the Lord Chiefe Justice of that realme are constituted Lords Justices.^b

The 13. Sir William Monson ^c was comitted close prisoner to the Tower, but the cause of his comittment is vnknowne.

The 19. att Westminster, the Erle of Sommerset and his wife, were indited for the deathe of Overburye, and the grande jurye found itt to be billa vera.

Cottingham,^d the Clarke of the Counsell, is sent into Spayne, and he carries with him a commandment (as is sayed) for the present retourne of Sir John Digby,^e his Majesties Ambassador there.

The reversion of the office was however in 1618 granted to Sir Richard; notwithstanding which he seems never to have enjoyed it, for upon the Earl of Thomond's death, in 1624, it was granted to the Earl's son and others in commission. (Liber Munerum Hiberniæ, Part II, p. 184.) Sir Richard Moryson was Cessor of Composition Money for the Province of Munster 1616-25, and in 1616 was granted the office of Lieutenant of the Ordnance for life, and also for the life of Sir William Harrington, (Sir Richard Moryson's will, Clark, 104,) who received the profits for some time after Sir Richard's death. (Ord. MSS.) Sir Richard Moryson married the daughter of Sir Henry Harrington, and died 1625. Will proved 30th December. His eldest son was knighted at Whitehall 8 October, 1627, and his daughter, Letitia, became the wife of Lucius Carey, the great Viscount Falkland. She was a lady whose character, according to Clarendon, bore, in some degree, a parallel to that of her distinguished husband. (Nichols's Hist. of Leic.) Sir Richard Moryson's brother, Fynes Moryson, was the author of the Annals of Ireland, published in Holinshed's Collection.

^d Francis Cottingham, a younger son of Philip Cottingham, of Godmanston, co. Somerset. He was for many years attached to the embassy at the court of Spain, and was well acquainted with Spanish affairs. Knighted and created a Baronet 1623, made Master of Wards and Chancellor and Under Treasurer of the Exchequer 1629, created Baron Cottingham, of Hanworth, 1631. He zealously attached himself to the Royal Cause in the following reign, and having attended Charles II. in his exile, died at Valladolid, in 1653, aged 77.

^e Sir John Digby, third son of Sir George Digby, of Coleshill, co. Warwick. Sir John was knighted 1605, created Baron Digby, of Sherborne, 1618, and Earl of Bristol 1622. Walpole mentions him in his Catalogue of Noble Authors. Died 1652.

In your next lett me intreat you to continew the course you have begonne, which is to be curious in the description of that huge monarchy, wherein I agree with you in opinion thatt all our Cosmographers are verymuche mistaken, and also to informe your selfe (as much as you may) of the historie and disposition of that people, and withall to lett me know how you proceed in your negotiation concerninge marchant trade. All novelties of that cuntrye will be wellcome vnto me, but especiallye bookes and coyne; as for loadstones, except they fall into your hands by chaunce, trouble not yoursellfe with a thought of them. You forgott, as I conceive by reason of your yll disposition of healthe (for the which I am extreme sorye) to say any thinge ether of there religion, or how the Jesuits proceed in the plantation of the Romishe doctrine, for I suppose you cannot butt finde mightie opposition by them: of these particulars I pray you to be mindfull and to avoyde trouble do as I do, which is to beginne your letter (att ydle tymes) two or three monethes before you make the dispatch, and yff itt be longe turne your servant Robert Jones (for whome I render you many thankes) to vndergoe thatt burden. January.

Januarye.—Sir Francis Barkeley,^a a gentleman of good estimation in Ireland, and a counsellor there, is dead.

The Count of Candall, sonne and heyre to the Duke of Espernon, in France, is a professed Protestant, and to assure the world thatt he was so in his hart, he nott onely received the comunion publicklic, but published a booke in print justifyinge the same.

The Duke of Buillon's death was practised by the Count Damp-

^a Sir Francis Barkeley, of Askeyton, co. Limerick, knighted by the Earl of Essex June 3, 1599. He was appointed Constable of Limerick Castle 1597, and, having married Catherine, the daughter of the Lord Chancellor Loftus, his patent passed the Great Seal without payment of fee. He held this office up to 1610 and afterwards. (Liber Munerum Hibernie, part ii. 116.)

martin,^a and should have bene put in execution by one Captayne Crasse, bothe Almanes; but it was discovered, whereby the danger was avoyded: the French Kinge and his mother lay then att Bordeaux, to expect the comminge of the yonge French queene out of Spayne, and the Prince of Condé, with his armye, quartered vpon the countrye nott farre of.

Sir Frances Verney is dead in the gallies at Sicillia; he led a disolute life, and mett with a miserable end.^b

February.—The Lord Rosse,^c the 13 of this moneth, was married February. to Sir Thomas Lake his daughter.

^a This is a mistake. The name was not Dampmartin, but Dampriere, as appears from the following extract from a despatch from Sir Thomas Edmondes, the Ambassador at Paris, to Winwood, dated 10 January 1615-16. "It fell out of late that an Almaine Count, called Count Dampriere, was taken by those of the Prince's armie as he returned from Bordeaux, who, at the instance of the Duke of Nevers, was set free without paying anie ransome. The which courtesie he did so ill requite as during the time of his being in the Prince's armie, he practised with one of the Captaines of the Reyters, called Cratz, not only to have debauched the companie under his charge, but also to have enterprised against the person of the Duke of Bouillon; promising him, in the name of the Queen, a reward of a hundred thousand crownes; the which proposition the capitaine having imparted to his lieutenant and others of his companie, to the end, as is said, to have drawn them to concurre with him in that action, the lieutenant discovered the practise; wherevpon the capitaine has ben putt vnder garde and his companie disposed of to an other." (S.P.O. French Corr.)

^b Sir Francis Verney, eldest son of Sir Edmund Verney, of Penley, co. Herts, by his second wife Audrey, daughter of William Gardner, of Fulmer, co. Bucks, and widow of Sir Peter Carew the younger. The career of Sir Francis Verney was an extraordinary one. Late in life his father married a third wife, by whom he had a son called Edmund. In 1598 he procured an Act of Parliament to enable him to cut off the entail of his estates and convey a portion to his youngest son. He died in 1600, when Francis sought the repeal of the Act for the settlement of his father's estates, but failed. The rejection of the bill excited him to desperation. He sold all his property, and is said to have proceeded to Algiers, and to have entered into the service of Muley Sidan, one of the sons and claimants of the throne of Muley Hamet, Emperor of Morocco. He afterwards became associated with the pirates, and finally died on 6th September, 1615, in the hospital of St. Mary of Pity in Messina, (not in the gallies, as stated in the text,) whither he had been brought from Tunis in his last illness for Christian advice and comfort.—Verney Papers, Camden Society.

Sir Thomas Dale^b returnede frome Virginia: he hathe brought divers men and women of thatt cuntrye to be educated here, and one Rolffe, who married a daughter of Pohetan, (the barbarous prince,) called Pocahuntas,^c hathe brought his wife withe him into England. The worst of thatt plantation is past, for our men are well victualled by there owne industrie, but yett no proffitt is returned. In the Bermudas little good is to be expected; they make some tobacco, but of other industrie I know nothinge. Since our plantation there the rats are so multiplied, whereof that island was free, as thatt they destroyed whatsoever is planted.

The Ambassador Lidger of Venice^d (nott him whome you lefte,) is dead.

^a See note ^e, p. 34.

^b Sir Thomas Dale, of Surrey, knighted 1606, sent out as Marshal of the Colony of Virginia 1611.

^c The first settlement of Virginia was made as early as 1585, but it was more than once nearly extinguished between that date and 1611, when Sir Thomas Gates was appointed Governor, from which time it steadily advanced in prosperity. This was greatly promoted by the marriage of a young Englishman called John Rolfe with Pocahuntas, daughter of Powhatan, the principal chief of the country, which led to a confirmed peace with her father, and through his influence with the other Indian tribes. Rolfe brought his wife to England with ten or twelve other natives, as stated in the text, where she was very favourably received, and presented to the King. Chamberlain says, "On 18 January, 1617, the Virginian woman Pocahuntas, with her father counsellor, have been with the King, and graciously used, and both she and her assistant well placed at the masque. She is on her return, but sore against her will."—Bireh, vol. i. p. 388. She never however left this country, but died at Gravesend in March 1618.—Bireh, vol. ii. p. 3.

^d Seignior George Barbarico. Died 27 May, 1615.

The 30. Sir Edward Cooke,^a the Lord Chief Justice, was sequestered from the councell-board and his circuit; the causes I do nott so perfectlye know as thatt I dare relate, for feare of mistakinge, nether amme I willinge to serche into the arcana of state. John Villers, elder brother to Sir George Villiers, (by the same father and mother,) was on the 27. day knighted, and placed with the prince, a gentleman of his bedchamber.

To satisfye the people thatt there was good cause for the arrest of the Prince of Condé, the Kinge with his mother went to the Court of Parliament, and there the Garde de Sceaux^d made a longe harangue declaring thatt the Prince entended to surprise the Kinge, and to sett the crowne vpon his owne head. The discoverye whereof (as itt is sayed and alladged by the Queene) was by the Archbishoppe of Bourges,^e the Princesse Countie, the Dukes of Rohan and Svlye. But the Duke of Svlye in the Court of Parliament hath cleared himselfe, and the Prince also, sayinge that he never knew of any yll dessigne in the Prince towards the Kinge. Nevertheless, bothe he and the Duke of Rohan remayne with the Kinge, and so doth the Dukes of Memoranye, Rayz,^f and Vzes,^g with a great boddy of the noblesse.

The Duke of Espernon lyes still and quiett in Bourdeaux, so dothe Monsieur Le Grande in his government in Burgundie: which way they will incline itt is dowbtfull. The Duke of Nevers is sayed to have ioyned with the Princes, but the report is nott certayne. The Duke of Longeville is with the Princes, who a few dayes before the arrest of the Prince of Condé had taken the towne of Peronne in Picardie; whereof the Marshall de Ancre was governour, and in itt a riche spoyle of the money and goodes of the Marshalls.

Monsieur de Crequi ^a is to be made a Duke and Peer of France.

Monsieur de Temines ^b (who arrested the Prince of Condé,) is made a Marshall of France, and Governour of Berry, which was the the Prince of Condé his government. Monsieur de Montignie, ^c one of the gyardes, is also made a Marshall; this gentleman pursued the Duke of Vendosme, who, lodginge neere vnto the Lovre, lept vppe to his horse without bootes, and by the goodnes of his horse he escaped to Laferre in Picardie.

The Captenshippe of Callice and of the Bastill is geven to Temines, and in offices and pentions to the valew (as it is reported) of 600,000 crownes. In lieu of the Captenshippe of Callice, which was promised vnto him, the Queene gave him 90,000 crownes.

Seven Englishe shippes, which this yere fished at Newfoundland, and from thence directinge there course for Italye, were within the streyghts assayled by 30 Turkish men of warre; two of them were sunk in fight, and the other five taken and pilladged, and the men detayned prisoners. Itt is thought thatt Sir Richard Hawkins^c of Plimouth was in one of them, for he is nott returned fromme the fishinge vppon the northern Englishe colonye, which Sir John Popham projected, and he intended to make sale of his fishe in Italye.

Thoughe the matters in France seeme to be quieted, yet a bitter storme is feared, and not vnlikelye, for diuers of the great men are confederated, and resolved to rvnne one fortune. Mareschall Dignores,^b Governour of Daulphine; Mounsieur D'Alencourt, Governour of Lyonnois; and Monsieur Le Grand, Governour of Burgundie, are ioyned in a firme league offensive and defensive. The Dukes of Nevers, Mayne, Vendosme, and Bovillon have done the like; the Duke of Gvise, Governour of Provence, as itt is reported, is gone to his government discontented, for, being in expectation to be Constable of France, fyndes opposition by Mareschall D'Auere, who affects the same office, and flatters hñsellfe with hopes to obtayne itt by the Queenes favour and power. divulged in print; amonge other things he reports of a travell by land in anno 1603, taken by a frier called Benedictus Joesius, a Portugois, from Lahor in Mogulles countrie vnto Paguin, from whence att thatt tyme a caravan departed. In performinge the travell two yerces was spent. And by my curious observation I finde thatt besides there dayes of rest in sundrye places there dayes of travell was 492. I conceve thatt a caravan may convenientlye, one day with another, pace tenne Englishe mile, by which account itt must be above 4000 miles from Lahor to Paguin: yf the extent of land betweene those places be so lardge, itt followes thatt all our cosmographers are muche mistaken, and China in the mappes must be stretched farther to the eastward than itt is described. The occasion of this frier's travell was by commandment of his superior, to discover Cataya and to see Cambalu, which countrye and cittie is likewise mistaken by our cosmographers, for the frier reports there is no other countries called Cataya but China, and thatt Paguin is the cittie which our writers call Cambalu, and that the people of Mogul's countrye know them by no other names. There is also a pamphlett lately extante of Corints travell vnto the Mogull's countrie, who reports of his owne beinge att Lahor, and of your arrivall att Svrat; you have him with you; of whose peregrination his verball relation will give you satisfaction, otherwise I would have sent you his booke.

You shall do well to informe your selfe whatt those countries are well over to the northe and north-east of Mogull, and whatt thatt prince is which we call the Great Cham, for itt is certayne there are large kingdomes whereof we are neerlye ignorant.

Vppon a more exact review of the booke aforesayed, which makes the report of the Portugall frier's travell fromme Lahor in Mogull's countrie to Paguin, which by the Moguls is called Cambalu, I find by Mercator's Geographie that the caravan took this course ensuinge.

From Lahor itt went to Cabul, seated in the northern latitude in 31 degrees, crossing the River of Indus north and by west.

From Cabul to Cascar in Turchestan, being in 46 degrees north and by east.

From Cascar to Chialis, in 55 degrees north-east.

From Chialis to Turphan, in 56 degrees north-east.

From Turpham to Camul, in 58 degrees north-east and by east.

From Camul to Sociev, or Savey, within the Tartars' Wall, in 48 degrees due south.

From Sociev, or Savey, to Paguin, the chiefe cittie in China, called by the Mogulls Cambalv, southe-east, and four monethes iourney.

Lahor, as I take itt, stands in 23 degrees to the northe of the line, and Paguin or Cambalv in 45 degrees of latitude, which is 22 degrees more to the northe then Lahor, so as itt appears that the next way for the caravan to have gone had been much shorter by a more easterlye course then to descend, as itt did, vnto 58 degrees of northe latitude, which was the cause of the longe travell, otherwise itt is most certayne thatt the voyage might have bene performed in lesse then 492 days.

I suppose that necessitie did enforce them vnto itt, the next way not beinge passable, by reason of mightie rivers, or some other natural impediment of mountaynes and desartes; wherefore I do correct my former opinion, that Asia ought to have a longer extent to the eastward then in the mappes is described, conceivinge thatt from Lahor to Paguin in a right lyne, there is nott little more then 2,000 myle English. Of this curiositie I pray you to enforme your selfe.

This last sommer 25 Portugalls and 3 French friers (which were lefte in Brasil when the Rivardine and the French plantation was defeated,^a) fittinge themselves with canoes passed vppe the river of Amazons, allmost as highe as to Quito in the northe part of Peru, and fromme thence overland vnto Carthagena: this paynfull iurney they performed in tenne monethes, and from thence they were embarqued for Spayne. In the Tercera an Englishe mr. saw theme, who reports by there relations, thatt they saw more gold (as they conceve) then any former tymes hath discovered: itt is able to sett a man's hart on fire to make prooffe of suche a fortune, but how to effect itt, hoc opus hic labor est. The observation I make is that the land of America is not a country of so large an extent as we conceive itt to be, but in breadthe muche lesse then is supposed, otherwise itt was impossible for these Portugalls to have perfourmed there voyadge in so few monethes.

The Northwest passage hath this last sommer bene attempted, but nothing effected, and nowe lesse hope to fynd itt then heretofore.

NOVEMBER.

News from the Low Countries.

November.—The newes from the Low Countries is thatt Count Henry of Nassav^a shall marrye the daughter of the Lantzgrave of Hesse: her portion is sayed to be 100,000 rex dollars. She is to be delivered att Arnhem, and married at the Hage.

From Italie we heare thatt the Duke of Savoy lies betwene two fires; in Piemont he is assayled by the Kinge of Spaynes armie, commanded by Don Pedro de Toledo, Governour of Millan, and in Savoy by the Duke of Nemours, his vnnaturall kinsman. In Piemont he hath lately lost a small towne called St. Germain, where the Spaniards fortifie.

Creation of the Prince of Wales.

The 4. of this monethe the prince was created Princee of Wales and Erle of Chester at Whitehall, with such pompe and solempnitie as hath bene accustomed.

At this great triumphe the Erle of Arundell was Erle Marshall,^b and 26 noblemen's sonnes made Knights of the Bathe: the list of there names you shall receve with these, and also the names of the Prince's officers, as well of his house as landes.

Note.—I cannott perfurme this promise, for att closinge vppe of this gazette the prince's house was not settled. In my next letter itt shall nott be omitted.

^a Henry Frederick, son of William Princee of Orange, born Feb. 1584, and succeeded his brother Maurice as Prince of Orange 1625. Died 1647. He married, 1625, Amalia daughter of John Albert Count of Solms.—Anderson, 544.

^b Thomas Howard, created Earl Marshal at the time of the baptism of the son of Sir John Egerton, see n. c, p. 47. Died 1646.

The manner of the prince's creation was this: ^a his Majestic beinge set in his chayre vnder the clothe of estate, the Knights of the Bathe presented themselves in there purple robes, making a gvarde through the which the prince was to passe; then the Erle Marshall and the Lord Chamberlayne ^b in there robes folowed; next vnto them Garter the principall Kinge at Armes ^c with the letters pattents in his hand; after whome the Erle of Sussex, ^d bearing the purple ermined robe, the trayne whereof was supported by the Erle of Huntingdon; ^e the Erle of Rutland ^f bare the sword with the pomell vpperward, the Erle of Derby ^g the ringe, the Erle of Shrewsbury ^h the golden rodde, the Duke of Lennox the cappe and coronet; then followed the prince in his purple kirtle, supported by the Lord Threasorer ⁱ and the Lord Admirall. ^k When the prince was come to the Kinge he kneeled, and so remayned kneelinge vntill the letters pattents were read by Mr. Secretarye Winwood, in the readinge whereof his robe and princelye ensignes were delivered and put vppon him; which done, he returned in the same forme he came into the hall, his trayne beinge borne by the Erle of Huntingdon. At dynner in the hall he sat in his robes, his cappe and coronet on his head, and the lordes aforesayed (which did the services above mentioned) in there robes dyned with him. The rest of the tryumphe was barriers, playes, and roninge at the ringe, which lasted two dayes.

The Turkes, who in former times knew nott any other then the Turkish pirates. Mediterranean Sea, nor other shippes of warre then gallees, have of late yeres (as you know) begonne to enter into the knowledge of crosse sayles, wherein now they are growne as perfitt as Christians. There belonges at this present the number of 70 shippes (the most whereof are above 200 tonnes) vnto the towne Angire: they do not onely take and spoyle all Christians thatt trade in the Levant, (which our Englishe marchantes to their great loss have felt,) but the coasts of Spayne and Barbarie (without the Streights) receives incredible damage by them, and of late eighteen of these Turkeshe pirattes sayled to the Azores, and landed in the Isle of St. Marie and spoiled all the iland, takinge all the inhabitants, men, women, and children, prisoners, leauinge the same desolate. It is feared thatt this next sommer they will seeke for purchase vpon the coasts of England and Irland. In the towne of Angire (as heretofore) the Englishe are well enoughe intreated, but yf they be taken at sea, ether outward or homeward bound, they are esteemed good price without redemption. Yf the Christian princes do nott by an vnanyne (sic) consent endeavoure there suppression, there coastes will be daylye infested, and the trade into the Levant will be vtterlye destroyed, for the numbers of pirattes encrease like Hidraes, and there shippes are for the most part manned with voluntarye renegados of all nations; but, to assure themselves of these renegados, the Turkes are so carefull as in every shippe there is three Turkes for one renegado.

journey, which how to compass all projects must be employed, and every man fears where it will light, being not a little terrified with a precedent of dangerous consequence, of one Robarts of Coruwall or Devonshire, whose father, an obscure fellow, dying exceeding rich, they say, by long use of interest, there was a privy seal sent unto him for 20,000*l.* with intimation that, whereas by law the King could seize upon all gotten by these usurious courses, he was of his clemency content to borrow this sum without interest. In conclusion the man was brought to lend 12,000*l.* to be repayed by 1,200*l.* a year."—Birch, i. 446. Whichever of these stories be true, Mr. Robartes was knighted on the 11th November in this year; created a Baronet 1621, and Baron Robartes 1625; and he doubtlessly, as was the practice of the age, paid handsomely for each of these honours. His father was John Robartes, a merchant of Truro.

This 24. of November, by a shippe of London thatt came frome the bottome of the Streights, itt is reported that the Hollanders men of warre (whom the Estates do employ to serve vpon those pirattes) came before the port of Tunis, and sent to the Kinge requiringe him to send vnto them such Hollanders as had bene lately taken att sea and made slaves, or ells they would take there revendge vpon all the Turkes they should meet withall, wherevpon the slaves were sent vnto them. I dowt whether this report be trew, because since the first divulginge of itt itt hath nott bene seconded. From thence they passed to Angier, and of that kinge they made the like demaund, who nott onely refused there desire, but sent them a raylinge and scornfull answer. The Hollanders ridinge in the port and ready to set sayle to be gone, att the very instant two Turkishe pirattes came bearinge in; the Hollanders assayled them, tooke the shippes, and, in view of the towne, hanged all the Turkes vpon the yardes armes, and so departed. The Kinge of Spayne (whose continent nott longe since hath bene invaded, and villadges nott far frome Malaga ransacked, and divers of his subiects carried away slaves,) is nott so forward to suppress these pirattes as is to be wished. Of any Christian prince itt most concernes him, and itt is a wonder vnto me thatt the Kinge and Counsayle of Spayne do nott take itt more at hart, for yf itt be suffered to grow on, the suppressinge of these common enemies to all commerce will be no less difficult in these our dayes then the Bellum Piraticum was to the Romans, which was nott the least of Pompeis triumphes.

Geve me leave a little to digress frome the nature of a gazette, and fall into a discourse nott unworthy the consideration. The passage through the Vaygats vnto Pechora in the Samoydes countrye (subiects to the Emperour of Moscovie) our Englishe marchants have often proved in the tyme of the yere to be open. The Russes, yerely, from St. Nicolas trade as farre as the mouth of the river of Ob, and retourne, the which we may also do. This great river of Ob (as I understand) on ether banke, even from the mouthe of itt unto the great lake from whence itt springeth,^a is possessed by the Moscovite, and in places convenient castles are seated and gwarded for the saffie of those which trade vppon thatt river. Betwene the rivers of Indus and Ganges and the Ob there is no great extent of land, why may not then the commodities of Mogulls countrie, Persia, and the kingdoms adiacent (yf the the rivers of Indus or Ganges be navigable as the Ob is) be brought vnto us with more ease, miche more saffie and lesse charge, then by the tedious and dangerous navigation now practised. I leave itt to your consideration, and yf the proiect be feasible (whereof in my opinion there is little dowbt) you may do your cuntrye good service, and winne honnour vnto yourselfe in beinge the projector of so good a worke. The greatest impediment which I concevè is the passage vppe the foresaid rivers and the land travell betwene them and Ob, for down that river vnto the sea I amme informed thatt the passage is easie and safe. Itt will be worthe youre care to learne whatt you may of the Indus, and of the nations betwene it and the Ob.

“The Grace of God of London,” of the burden of 180 tonnes, which put to sea from the coast of Spayne (loaden with Spanishe commodities) the 28 of September, is thought to be taken [by] the Turkishe pirattes within the mouthe of the Streygthes: more of the like misfortunes we must expect by those infidells.

A prophecy.

Profetia mandata dal Nuntio di N. S. in Francia all' Illustrissimo Cardinal Borghese, la quale é stata trovata nel riuere un fondamento d'vn pilastro vna Cassetta di marmo, nella chiezza di S. Dionigi, scritta in lingua Ebraica.

1620. Bellum magnum in tota Italia.

1622. Pastor non erit.

1623. Ira Dei super vniversam terram.

1624. A paucis cognoscetur Christus.

1625. Resurget magnus vir.

1626. Africa ardebit, et luna scaturiet sanguinem.

1627. Terræmotus magnus in toto orbe.

1628. Evropa, Africa, et Asia trepidabunt.

1629. Infidèles trinum et unum Deum cognoscent.

1630. Extinguentur Lumina, et unus Pastor et unum ovile.

Of this idle prophetic you may beleeeve what you list; for my owne particular I geve no more credit vnto them then vnto Las patrannas dellas mugeres viejas.^a

His Majestie is daylye wowed^b by the Frenche and the Spanish Kinges for to marry his sonne, our hopefull prince, vnto a French madame, or a Spanishe infanta: the Kinge our master deliberates, and so conceales his intention as no man knows vpon which of them the lot will fall.

The Duke of Vrbin is shortlye to marry with the third sister of the Duke of Florence.^c He hathe of late beene at Florence, where he was magnificentlye intertayned, but the marriage deferred vntill the great Duke's^d retourne frome Lorretto, whether he is gone to pay a vow he made in a great sickness which he had, and duringe his absence the Duchesse daylye goes frome church to church, prayinge for his safe retourne.

French news.

Temines, the new made Mareschall of France, is now discharged from the command of the Bastill, and the same is committed to Mareschall de Anere, of whose care to keep the Prince of Conde there is no doubt to be made.

The Earle of Arundell received into the Church of England.

This Christmas day the Erle of Arundell received the communion in Whitehall, and there is no doubt but he is as firmly settled in our religion as may be wished, which is a good leadinge example to other of our noblemen, which are refractorie to conformitie.^a Difference with the Netherlands respecting dyed and dressed cloths.

Ever since your departure from England there hath beene a great difference between vs and the United Provinces, about our Englishe clothes, for they will not permitt the sellinge of our clothes which are died and dressed in England in there estate, and to manifest there dislike, they published an edict prohibitinge vppon payne of confiscation any of our clothes to come into there portes; we on the contrarye are as resolute to enforce them to buy our dressed and died clothes, or ells to remove our residence at Middlebourge. This hath reseed sundry consultations at the Councell Bord, where the Kinge hath sundry tymes bene personallye with his lords; but yet the busines is not ended. For the better composinge of this great worke, of these qualities in the King. He also made some unpalatable observations on religion, shewing a puritan tendency. (S.P.O. Dom. Corr. vol. viij. 85.) In 1617 he was permitted to preach at Paul's Cross. (Ibid. vol. xcij. 88.)

^a Chamberlain, writing to Carleton on 4th January, 1617, says, "The Earle of Arundell received the Communion on Christmas day in the Kinges Chappell, where there were two excellent sermons made that day by the Bishop of Winchester and the Bishop of Ely, and a third that afternoone in Powles by the Bishop of London, and I heard the Bishop of Rochester as much commended at his parish of St. Giles without Creplegate. Yesterday there fell a great mischancee to the Earle of Arundell by the burning of his house (built and left him by the Earle of Northampton) at Greenwich, where he likewise lost a great deale of houshold stufte and riche furniture, the fury of the fire being such that nothing could be saved. No doubt the Papists will aseribe and publish yt as a punishment for his dissembling or falling from them." (S.P.O. Dom. Corr. vol. xc. 8.) Sir Horace Vere, writing to Carleton on the 8th January, says, "My Lord of Arundell hath received the sacrament with the Kinge this Christmas, and, as I hear, in his discourses with his Majesty is sharp agaynst the Papists, which is a good argument of his synceritie."—Ib. 11.

which troubles bothe vs and them, they send there agents hether, which are daylie expected; in the mean tyme our merchants labour with the Archduke ^a to have a place of residence in his territories, which is like enoughe to take effect.

To avoyd bothe your trouble and myne, I leave you to the report of the Englishe factors, which do now go to Suratt, who cane at lardge discourse vnto you the reasons of the differences between vs, which arisethe onely about matter of proffit, for the dyinge and dressinge of clothes in England takes from them the mayntenance of 600,000 persons who gayned there livinges by the dressinge and dyinge of Englishe clothe, which we are desirous should be kept within the realme for the reliefe of our poore people. Yf you call to mynde the new companye of marchaunts adventurers which were erected before you left England, who vndertooke to carry no clothes but dressed and dyed out of the realme, you will quicklye conceve the cause of the difference betweene vs and the Hollanders; the progression in which busines will aske a lardge discourse and a better relater than myselfe, but when it is concluded and ended, I will nott forgett to lett you know the conclusion.

Sir Walter Raleghe hath built a goodlye shipp of 500 tonnes; in this monethe she was lanchd, and is called the "Destinye." God graunt her to be no lesse fortunatt vnto her owner than is wished by me! tinent of America, the Spaniards (and especiallye about Orinoque) beinge so poorelye planted as they are.

The King resolved to visit Scotland.

The Kinge is resolved this next springe to visite Scotland. Vppon the 15 day of Marche he beginnes his iorney: the gistes^a are alreadye sett down, bothe for his lodgings in goinge and retourninge. The sommer he will spend there; and, before bucke tyme be throughlie past he meanes to make us happie with his presence. Least some alteration should happen, I do yett forbear to send you the list of the noblemen and others of quallitie which are appoynted to attende him in this longe progresse; but I am confident that the iorney will holld. His gistes comminge and goinge throughe England I send you with these; his gistes in Scotland we know nott.

A coat of armes granted to the common hangman.

The 28th of this monethe the Kinge was informed that Garter the Principall Kinge att Armes had geven a coate of armes vnto one Gregorie Brandon the hangman of London, whereatt his Majestic was highly offended, commandinge the Lords Marshalls to examyne the truth. The fact was proved to be trew, for the armes was produced vnder the seale of the office, and testified by Garter's subscription; but in the procuringe of itt he was muche abused, for one came vnto him with the armes readie paynted in parchement, and an attestation formallye drawne fitt for his subscription in dew forme, sayinge that this Gregorie Brandon was a marchant of good abilitie then in Spayne, and thatt he was descended frome one Brandon that sometymes was Mayor of London. Garter, findinge that the armes was belonginge to the familie of Brandons thatt had bene dwellinge in London, and supposinge (as he was informed) thatt this hangman had been trewlye a merchant in Spayne, attested that Gregorie Brandon might lawfully beare the coate which was brought vnto him. This abuse was contrived by Yorke Herald^b to draw Garter into disgrace. The conclusion I think will fall out thatt the one will be punished for foolerie, and the other for knavery.

of which faults they are g'viltie. In the meane tyme the hangman is now a gentleman, which he never dreamed of. Since the hearinge of the cause Garter and Yorke were bothe committed prisoners by the Lords Marshalls to the Marshaltie, where they yet remaine.

I tolde you thatt nott many dayes past Monsieur Temines had the government of the Bastill in Paris taken from him and committed to the care of Marshall d'Ancre; the cause of his displacinge arose out of jealousy conceived thatt the Prince of Conde had gayned some interest in him. The resolution beinge taken (to remove him without danger or noyse) he was sent for by the Queene Mother, who was in the Lovvre. In his absence he left his sonne to supplye his office, who by devise was drawne out of the Bastill to walk ether in the garden, or some such place: he was no sooner out of the gates but the drawbridge was pulled vppe and a comission read for the placinge of the Marshall d'Ancre in thatt chardge. The Marshall Temines, ashamed to tarry in Paris any longer with such a scorne, is gone discontented from the Court,* and the vniversal discontentment throughout all France hathe so farre enlarged itt sellfe as all men are of opinion thatt shortlye a bitter warre will ensue. The Duke of Gvise hathe carried himselfe so indiscretlye betweene the Queene and the Princes as thatt he is trusted by nether side, yett he remaines in the Court with as many discontents as his hart can beare.

Marshal
Temines removed from the government of the Bastille.

In Aix or Aquis-grane the Emperors' comissioners have proceeded secretlye agaynst them of the religion, and of late some have bene executed for matters of religion onelye, some others banished and confiscated, and very many grievouslye fined. Most of the confiscations have bene geven to the Jesuites.

General news.

In the Low Countries, I meane the Vnited Provinces, the estates are muche troubled about the multiplicite of religions which daylye increases amongst them, for the reformation whereof comissioners are appointed; but whatt will be the yssue God knowes.

* To geve him some satisfaction the Queene hathe made his sonne the capten of her guard, and with fayre words hathe so bewitched the old man as thatt he did nott abandon the Court.

Count John of Nassau, who longe since hath embarked his regiment against the Archduke Ferdinand, is hetherto stayed by contrary wyndes, and sicknes is fallen amongst them; which yf itt increase itt is feared thatt the designe will breake.

A riche shippe of the Netherlands thattooke in her ladinge (att Cipres) in the bottom of the Levant, and beinge safelye arryved at Amsterdam, by misfortune was fired, no man knows how, so as very little of the merchandize was saved.

This last day of December the matter of clothe beinge dealt in by the Kinge and his counsayle, itt is found, apparentlye, thatt the new companie of marchant adventurers are not able to performe the vndertakinge which they promised for the dyinge and dressinge of our clothes within the realme, where vppon the olde companie are like to be agayne established, butt whatt will be there conditions is nott yett agreed vppon: a few dayes will drive this busines to an yssue.

French news.

The Duke of Espernon continewes in armes agaynst the Rochellers, but we do nott heare of any great attempt performed on ether part.

The Duke of Nevers, to assvre (in this vncertayne tyme in France) a little walled towne of his vppon the borders of Lorryne (the name whereof I have forgotten^a), put a garrison into itt. The Queen demanded the towne of him to place a garrison of hers in the same; which he refusinge, she corrupted his men; his garrison is displaced, and the Queenes gvard keeps itt for her vse, which hath so discontented the Duke as now he is ioyned with the other princes, who are dispersed into there severall governments, preparinge, as itt is sayed, for a new warre: few or none of the great men of France comes to the court.

The Duke of Savoy hath recovered all his places in Piemont from the Spaniards, except the towne of St. German.

att Greenwich (by the negligence of servants) is burned all (but the gallerye) to the ground, wherein the Erle of Arundell (whose house it was,) loste a greate part of his household stuffe, which was of greate valew.^a

The 4. the new Companie of Marchant Adventurers were dissolved, and the old company was restored, who promise to effect the dressinge and dyinge of clothes within the realme, which beinge performed, one of the best workes thatt ever was thought vppon (for the commonwealthe) will be established; God graunt thatt I may live to see itt!^b

New Company of Merchant Adventurers dissolved, and the Old Company restored.

The 5. the Vicecount Villiers was at Whitehall created Erle of Buckingham; the Erle of Montgomerie carried his robes, the Erle of Dorset his sword, the Duke of Lennox, as Erle of Richmond, his cappe, the Lord Admiral his coronet, and supported by the Erle of Suffolk Lord Threasurer, and the Erle of Worcester Lord Privie Seale.

The last newes of France is that the Marshall d'Ancre's onely daughter is dead, with whom he offered 800 thousand crownes in marriage. It is sayed the Duke of Espernon's second sonne, Monsieur La Vallette, shall be made a Duke of France, thatt his third sonne shall be a cardinall. But I conceive them to be but ayrie reports.

French news.

The Queene, as is reported, entends to send some companies to do some exploite vppon the Duke of Nevers, against whom she hathe conceived an implacable displeasure. Most of the princes of France are assembled at Soyssons, which is under the government of the Duke de Mayne, where itt is thought thatt some great desseygne will be concluded, the yssue whereof will shortlye appeare.

^a See note ^a, p. 70.

^b Chamberlain writing to Carleton on 4th January says, "After so long and vehement debating, the Old Companie of Marchant Adventurers is to be set up again, and this day theyre charter to be restored to them, but with what conditions and limitations I have not yet learned." S. P. O. Dom. Corr. vol. xcii. 85.

The report goes thatt the Kingdome of Navarre and the signorics of Bearne and Bigorre are to be vnited and annexed, as Brettagne is, vnto the crowne of France; which is a great blow to the Duke of Rohan's title, who is heyre in remaynder vnto the children of Kinge Henry the 4. and geves fuell to his former discontentments.

General news.

We have newes of the Lord Rosse's safe arryval att Lisbone, and thatt a fewe dayes before his cominge thether the West Indie Fleete (enforced by fowle wether) came into thatt porte richlye laden, to the valew of 20 millions of ducatts, whereof 9 millions in silver and gold was presentlye (sent) overland vnto Madrid. Allso att the same tyme the East Indie Fleet arrived there, which att no tyme hathè beene seene thatt bothe the fleetes should meet in one harborough.

News from Germany.

The report frome Collen, in Germanie, is thatt the second sonne of Spayne^a is to marrye with the second daughter of France,^b but in England there is no suche newes, nether do I think itt to be likelye.

The Frenche companies serginge the Estates have nott receved for 12 monethes past any wages out of France, which makes the Netherlanders conceve thatt the Queenc entendes nott to continew them in thatt service, as hetherto they have beene.

For the Kinge of Spayne leveis of mariners are made in the Archduke's dominions, and great wages are proffered vnto all suche Hollanders as will serve him: to whatt end they are levied is yett vnknowne, but supposed to be agaynst the Turkishe pirattes, and to man his East Indie Fleete, now in settinge forthe, which consists of 7 or 8 great gallions and divers smaller vessels; but itt is thought thatt out of the Vnited Provinces few or none will serve him.

There is a great mortallitie of souldiours in the regiment which are aboard their shippes to go for Venice under Count John of Nassau, and to supplie there roomes others are daylie levied: yf they depart nott the sooner the designe is in danger to be broken.

^b Christina, daughter of Henry IV., born 1606, married Amadeus Duke of Savoy 1619, died 1663.

The Queene to assure the Isle of France, which is the Duke de Maynes government, hathe put all the tenible places within the same into the handes and charge of the Marshall de Ancre, which increases the discontent of the grandes.

This 16. of Januarye, Sir Thomas Smithe, with certayne of the East Indie Companie, presented to the Lords of the councill the coppie of a lettre of yours, dated att Asmore in Februarye last, and sent overland to Aleppo, where the English Consull opened the same, and sent the aforesayed coppie by the next messendger to Sir Thomas Smithe. But your lettres to his Majesty, to the lordes of the councill and others, were delivered (as Sir Thomas Smithe tolld me) to Mr. Porie^a (our oldd acquayntance) by the Consull of Aleppo,* who is nott yett come into England, but daylie expected, whose death long since was constantlye affirmed to be at Constantinople. In this coppie presented vnto the lords, there is a proiect of yours, for the openinge of a trade in Persia; the lords like so well of itt, and the marchants so willinge to finde itt, as thatt it is concluded thatt a tryall thereof shall be made; further particularities I need nott write, for Sir Thomas Smithe must necessarilye acquaynt you with itt, for you must be the chiefest actor in the performance of the worke, and vnto his lettres I referre you. Since there is suche a madnes in England as thatt we cannott endure our hometmade clothe, but must needes be clothed in silke, itt cannott be gayne-sayed but the silkes bought att the first hand is the best husbandrye, and therefore to settle a trade in Persia (prima facie) is bothe convenient and commodious; but nothinge cane be so cleerely good thatt hathe not itt exception, Roe's letters.

Proposed trade with Persia.

* The consull at Aleppo sent your pacquett to the Ambassador att Constantinople, who sent them by Mr. Porye for England.

^a Mr. John Pory was educated at Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.A. in 1610. He was a man of extensive travel, and of great talent and general information as to what was going on in the political world both at home and abroad. Notwithstanding his habits of intemperance, he seems to have been on intimate terms with many of the most eminent of his contemporaries, to whom he often performed the office of secretary. Died 1635.

and therefore (in my opinion) there are three obiections worthy the consideration: the first is the least, the other two of more importance. My first obiection is the port of Jasques,^a which to my seeming (according to Mercator's description nott haveinge any portable river) is inconvenient ether to haveinge the commodities of the countrye vnto itt, or to vent ours into the land. But hereof you may bettre informe your sellfe then we canne, liuinge so remote from itt, and itt may be thatt a convenient port to our marchants likinge may be found, wherefore I will no longer insist vpon this obiection.

My second and third obiections are meerlye matter of state, which will require mature consideration.

In December last, (as in the Gazette of that moneth you may see,) I related vnto you how yll our men are vsed att Constantinople, and as farre as I canne judge there yll usage is liklier to continew then receve amends; yf we shall settle a trade in Persia, how farre forth the Grand Signor may be irritated to the confiscation of all the Englishe marchants goodes (throughout his dominions) is to be feared, whereby the kingdome shall receve great damage, and a profitable trade destroyed. Here vnto itt may be answered that, so longe as we shall demeane ourselves in a peaceable manner towards the Turkes, thatt there is no cause why he should take offence att itt. This reason amonge Christians is so prevalent and just as thatt itt would geve sufficient satisfaction, but how itt may worke in the hart of a Turke, who governs his actions by no other rule then by his will, for my owne part I amme dowbtfull. The third obiection is how we may draw vnto vs the silkes of Persia, which are onelye solld (as I have beene informed) for readie money: yf they cannot be gotten by no other meanes, thatt trade onelye will exhaust the threasure of the realme, for, yf I be nott deceved, 600,000^{li}. will scarcely be able to drive thatt trade. Your judgement gayned by your present employment is better able to resolve this doubt than mine of so little experience, wherefore I referre my selfe vnto itt, prayinge you in your next to signifie your opinion vnto me in all the three obiections. Vnderstandinge thatt the East Indie fleet is ready to fall downe the river, I am enforced to end this gazzette, which will be more troublesome for you to reade then itt was for me to write, for, ever since Januarie 1615 itt hath beene in writinge, which course I do wishe you to observe in your lettres vnto me, and then I shall be sure to have longe lettres, good discourse, and store of novelties, every thinge of those partes beinge rare vnto vs. God prosper you in your employment with no less happines than your owne hart desires, and rest assured thatt you shall never fayle to the prayers, services, and love, of

Your L. most affectionatt trew friend,

Savoy, this 18th of Januarye, 1616.

Thatt you may know how the affayres of the kingdome hath passed since your departure I do send you two of Mercurius Gallo-belgier's editions, and the manifest made by the Archbishop of Spalato, wherein he geves reasons for his defection frome the Church of Rome; and so once agayne I pray God for my Lord Ambassador's saftie in the Indies, and for his safe retourne. Your Lordship may see thatt I have somme creditt with your Mrs., or rather with the best part of yoursellfe, for so itt is rumoured, though by her constantlye denied, but I amme confident itt is so, and for your sake vntill your retourne I will not fayle to do her all the service I may.

LETTER IV.^a

My first lettre vnto you was of the 18. of Aprill, 1615: my second of the 24. of Januarye in eodem anno, and my third and last before this bare date the 18. Januarye, 1616: the Gazette is longe, conteyninge 12. sheetes of paper. Whatt this will prove I know nott, but whether itt happen to be great or small you cannot be freed from the trouble of readinge an yll hand which will trye youre patience.

January.

January 1616.—The Duke of Nevers, in France, was vpon the 17. of this monethe (stilo novo), proclaymed a traytor, which is an induction to a warre subsequent. Amonge other causes of this proceedinge agaynst him, these two are the principallest: the first thatt, beinge trusted in anno 1615 with a competent armye of the Kinges to have impeached the Prince of Conde in his marche towards Bourdeaux, when the Kinge was there to receve his Spanishe wife, he permitted him to pass the Loyre, beinge in his power (as is alleaged) for him to have hindered itt; and the second for puttinge of a garrison into his towne of Saynt Monchute, and denyngge to receve the Kinges sent thether by the Queene mother, which afterward (as in my last lettre you may see)^b he was dispossessed of, by coruption of his officers. The princes are on all hands preparinge for the warre, and to quicken there spiritts there hathe beene very latelye an assassinatt taken, who hathe confessed that he was promised a great reward to have murdered the Duke de Mayne in Soyssons; he was discovered by one whom he laboured to be a partie with him in the murder. How these princes will accord amonge themsellves vpon a chiefe, they will find mucche difficultie, and as yett nether the boddie of the religion nor any good towne is knowne to stand for them, but when the drum beates itt is thought they will want no assistance; in the meane tyme itt is reported thatt within there particular governments they are bold to take uppe the Kinges rents towards there defence. The Duke of Savoy prospers in Piemont, having thrust the Spaniards out of itt, and lately he hath taken the boldnes to make an attempt vpon the Duchie of Myllan, in the which he hath wonne 4. or 5. good townes.

From Gvernsey I had intelligence thatt in Spayne there is a great fleet in preparinge to the sea, the pilott maior is sayed to be an Englishman; some say itt is for Phillipines, others for Angiere, but those of soundest judgement conceive itt to be for France, in ayde of the Kinge. Itt will nott be longe before we shall see vpon whatt land this clowd will breake.

The newes from Colleyne is thatt the Duke of Brunswicke ^a refuses News from Cologne. to obeye the decree of the Imperiall Chamber in deliveringe (as he was enioyned) the territorye of Grobenhagen vnto the Duke of Luneburge,^b and for the assuringe of the same he hath garrisoned all the best townes and villages within that territorye. The Duke of Luneburge importunes the Commissioners to put the sentence in execution, and hath allreadie amassed troopes of soldiours to thatt end, which is thought will be the beginninge of a warre in those partes.

The Kinge of Denmarke, as itt is sayed, hath lately made great provisions of armes, to the end, as is supposed, to make an attempt vpon Lubecke or Hambourge, and purposeth to build a stronge fort vpon the River of Elbe, requiringe the Hambourgers to permitt 3,000 of his men to passe through there towne.

The Vnited Provinces are sendinge of Comissioners into England

^a Frederick Ulric, Duke of Brunswick Wolfenbuttel. He restored Grubenhagen to the family of Luneburg, 1617.

^b Christian, second son of William Duke of Brunswick Luneburg. William left seven sons. The brothers resolved not to divide the dukedom, and cast lots who should marry for the purpose of perpetuating the line. The lot fell to George, the sixth brother. They also agreed to reign in succession, one after another, according to seniority. Christian, in accordance with this arrangement, succeeded his brother Ernest 1611. He was made Bishop of Minden 1599, and of Halberstadt 1616, which see he resigned to a son of the King of Denmark 1623. Died 1633.—Anderson.

to treat with his Maiestic about the affayres of Cleves, which was accorded at Xanten.^a [The Archdukes will nott leave the Low Countries for the kingdome of Portugall, but are contented to accept of the kingdome of Valentia in Spayne, whether they are to go to be crowned shortlye, and into the Low Countries Don Carlos^b is to come from Spayne to governe those dominions.

Certayne companies which are now in garrison in the Duchie of Jvliers are to be sent by the Kinge of Spayne to the ayde of the Archduke Ferdinand agaynst the Venetians, whose places are to be supplied with new levies.]*

The Kinge of Spayne, as is reported, is to marry with the Duke of Florence his sister, and that he will make ether a peace or a long truce with the Turke, and to thatt end a principall Jesuiste is to be employed, thatt he may have the better meanes to employ his forces with better assurance in Evrope agaynst the Christians with whome he is in warre. Thus farre is the newes from Colleyne, how muche of itt will prove trew tyme will discover.

He says, on the other hand, that it was without a precedent that a man should be honoured with the dignity of Marshal of France who had never served in an army; or be at once entrusted with the seals and the purse of the King: that is to say, with his whole authority; and that such power, vested in a single person, was dangerous to the state and monarchy.—Memoirs of the Duke of Rohan.

French news.

May.—After the deathe of the Mareschall d'Ancre the King never spake with the queene his mother untill she was in her coach readie to depart out of Paris to go vnto the castle att Blois, where she is assigned to live. At the instant of her departure (to satisfie her desire) the Kinge came unto her, but his pleasure was first signified how farre and in what sorte her speeche should tend, and thatt she should nott speake but within those limits. The substance of her speeche was, thatt she was sorry thatt she could do him no further service in the affayres of estate, prayinge him to beleve thatt she had employed her best care and

She prayed God to assist him with good counsayles in his affayres, and interceded somewhat for Barbin the Comptroller of the Fynances. The Kinge gave many thanks for her care and paynes, and assured her thatt he would be ever readie to geve her contentment in all thatt was in his power.

Then she complemented a little while with Monsieur de Lvynes, gevinge him assurance of her good affection vnto him.

Betwene her and the yonge Queene the takinge of leave seemed to be somewhat confused, as yf the Queene mother had some touche of envye att the honnours she was to leave.

In passinge through the towne of Paris there appeared in her countenance rather menacinge then deiection.

She was accompanied with the two princesses her daughters, a great troope of ladies, her owne garde, and a cornett of 50 horse, comanded by Monsieur de Curre.

As soon as the Mareschall d'Ancre was slayne the Kinge wrote vnto the Dukes of Vendosme, Nevers, Mayenne, and the Marques Coevre; vppon the receypt whereof, within a few dayes, they came vnto him, the day after his mother's departure, and found him with the Queene att Bois de Vincennes, where they were graciously received, and they made there submissions.^a ^c For the cause of the enmity which existed between the Kings of Sweden and Poland see note ^b, page 84. The following circumstances will explain the ground of jealousy with Russia. Upon the deposition of the Emperor Basilius in 1610, in order to avoid the pretensions of the impostor Demetrius, the Russians conferred the crown upon Uladislaus, son of Sigismond III., King of Poland. This, however, was only to gain time. In 1613 the Russians revolted, drove out Uladislaus, and elected Michael Foederowitz Emperor. Two years afterwards Uladislaus made an attempt to recover the sovereignty, and a truce was entered into for 14 years, leaving the Duchies of Serevia, Czernichoro, and Novogrod, which the Poles had taken during the war, in their hands, and the permanent possession of these territories was confirmed by treaty in 1631.

The Kinge of Sweden, havinge discovered thatt divers of his subiects had traffique withe the Kinge of Pole in the furtherance of his entended enterprise vppon Sweden, hath cut of the handes of some of the cheefest delinquents, and, to put the Polocke in despaire to be elected Kinge, hath, accordinge to the forme of thatt countrie, caused himselfe to be crowned*.

shall d'Ancre.

Itt is reported thatt the Frenche Kinge hathe caused an arrest to be made in Venice of 40,000 crownes which the Mareschall de Ancre had there in banke. There is also in Amsterdam 17 great chestes of the Mareschall d'Ancre's arrested which were brought thether frome Reven, and were to have bene carried to Livorno: itt is thought thatt great store of money and iewells are in them.*

Fifteene hundred souldiours, levied in the Vnited Provinces for the Kinge of Sweden, are latelye embarqued, and are accompanied with 6 or 7 good shippes of warre.

The Count of Levenstein, a German, is presentlye to embarque att Amsterdam 3,000 foote, which he hathe levied in the ayde of the Venetians against the Archduke Ferdinand, commonlye called the Duke of Gratz: they are to pass the Strayts as the Count John of Nassav hathe done.

The Prince Mavrice his eldest base sonne, who was 16 yere olld, is latelye dead; his deathe is greatlye lamented, being a youthe of great expectation.

In revendge of the great spoyles which the Cossackes (who are protected by the Kinge of Pole) have done vpon the Turkes in the Black Sea, all by sea as vpon the maritime townes, the Grand Signor hathe sent an armye of 80 thousand horse and foote vpon the frontiers of Poland, whereby thatt kingdome suffers extreme calamities. To resist this great army the Kinge of Pole, with the ayde of some Christian princes his neyghbours, hathe levied great forces.

The Cantons of Bearne and Zuricke confederatt themselves with the Duke of Savoy agaynst the Spaniard, and they have sent to the Grisons to permitt passadge for 8,000 of there Swisses to pass vnto the Venetians ayde, whereunto they easilye assented, beinge more intimate vnto the State of Venice then vnto the Governour of Millan. Hetherto the Gazette from the Hage.

The Turkishe piratts dominier in the Mediterrane Sea, and our ^{Turkish Pirates.} marchants are daylye taken by them, in so muche as, yf the Christian princes do nott endeavour there extirpation, the trade into the Levant willbe vtterlye destroyed. In Spayne they spoyle the maritime villages and take many prisoners, which is principallye affected by the banished Moores that once inhabited the easterne coast of Spayne. It is to feared that these piratts, which now are become good mariners, will visite ere itt be longe the christian coastes upon the ocean.

The Duke of Ossvna, Viceroy of Naples, is commanded (as itt is reported) to recall his shippes sent into the Gulphe of Venice, wherevpon the Venetians do recall there armada, which was att sea, to attend his attempts.

To the contrarye of this last above written intelligence, itt is affirmed, by lettres newlye arrived from Venice, thatt the Duke of Ossvna's fleet, consisting of 12 gallions, 19 gallies, and 4 galliotts, of which sayed galliotts one Capten Eliott, our countryman, and an ancient sea capten, is commander, lye still in safe road neere vnto Ragusa; thatt the Duke of Ossvna hath sent a present of a shippes loadinge of Turkishe slaves to the Grand Signor ransome free; thatt he invites him to attempt the winninge of Candia, assuringe him thatt he will keep the Venetian sea forces from passinge out of the Gvllphe to him any impediment.

The 12. of this monethe, Sir Walter Raleghe sett sayle att Pli- <sup>Raleghe's Ex-

The 26. of this monethe I saw lettres which came from Venice, ^{Affairs of Italy.}

which report thatt the Venetian armada in the Gulphe or Adriatique Sea have encountred with the Spanishe fleet, and of them they have sunke 2 galleons, and taken 2 gallies of Naples,* but the reporte speakethe of a greater victorie. In these lettres itt is likewise affirmed thatt notwithstandinge the Duke of Ossvna's present of slaves to the Grand Signor, and instead of attemptinge any thinge vppon the Isle of Candia, he hath comanded his Capten Bassa to geve his attendance with 70 gallies and 10 shippes of warre to attend the Venetian generall in the Gvllphe, and to be disposed by him agaynst the Spaniard,† besides the sayed Bassa hath commission to draw into Albania 10,000 souldiers (as a further ayd) yf need required itt. A Holland shippe with 200 souldiers bound for Venice fell into the Spanishe fleet, but suche was the Hollanders' resistance and dexteritie thatt the shippe recovered Ragusa, from whence they marched to Cataro, and there is no dowbt of there safe comminge to the Venetian army, which lies att the siedge of Gradisca. The Spaniards demanded these souldiers of the Ragusans, who, denienge there demand, in revendge they spoyled the countrie about the towne even to the walls. In the Haven they tooke the Holland shippe, hanged the master, and made the mariners slaves. The Venetian armye are masters of the filld, and lye close to Gradisca, and have planted there batterie, and in the hope to winne itt. The Archduke's Generall Tranmansdorffe is slayne. Vercelly, a towne of the Duke of Savoyes, is beseedged by the Spaniards, nevertheless the Duke hath 3 tymes put succours into itt. The Marques of Caluzo, the governour of the towne, in the sight of the beseedgers, vppon the wall of the towne hanged the Podesta, the principall magistrate of Vercelli, because he vsed perswasions to the inhabitants to render themselves vnto the Spaniards. The towne is well manned, and provided of all things, so as itt is thought thatt the governour of Millan will fayle in the enterprise.

* For the sinkinge and takinge of these galleons and gallies, bonfires were made in Venice, but there was no suche victorie, or any encountre by sea.

† This newes is uncertayne, but it is sure that the Turke is well inclined to assist the Venetians.

The Archduke Ferdinand of Gratz, with all the nobilitie of Stiria, Carinthia, and Croatia, and also accompanied with the Archduke Maximillian, is gone to Brage to beginne the Diet, wherein himselfe expecteth to be elected Kinge of Bohemia.

Affairs of Germany.

Since which tyme we are credible advertised that he is elected Kinge of Bohemia, and by degrees there is little dowbt to be made of his beinge Emperour.

Sir John Digby is gone from London to embarque himselfe in the west countrie for Spayne; but the marriage so much bruted betweene the hopefull Prince and the Infanta remaines dowbtfull.

July. Madame d'Ancre executed. General news.

About the latter end of this last moneth Sir John Egerton, Vicecount Brackeley, had his lettres pattents delivered vnto him for his Eirdome of Bridgewater, so as now he is a confirmed Erle.

The English councellers which attended the Kinge into Scotland are all of theme sworne councellers of thatt realme.

Sir John Herbert, the ancient Secretary of Estate,^a is dead.

The Archduke Ferdinand of Gratz is crowned Kinge of Bohemia, and makes itt his steppe to the kingdom of the Romans, and so to the Empire. He is an obstinatt Papist Jesuited, and will nott permit a Protestant into his house or court to serve him.

Foreign news.

The Cossackes (who are an vnregular people dwelling betwene Evrope and Asia and in the Ilands in the Blacke Sea, and vnder the protection of the Kinge of Poland,) have gevinge suche a great overthrow vnto the Turkes in the Blacke Sea as it dothe in a manner destroy the trade betwene the Tartares and the Turkes. The Grand Signor is much troubled with itt, for itt diverts his sea forces from doinge of any exploytes in the Mediterran Sea.

Gradisca is nott yett wonne by the Venetians, nor Vercelli by the Spaniards; they are, as of longe tyme they have bene, closely besiedged, but nether of them as yett taken.

^a He was second, or under, Secretary of State in 1603.

The Turke hathe lately sent an ambassador to the Emperour to require him to deliver vnto him sixty villages in Hungaria, wrongfully (as he sayethe) detained from him. Yf he refuse the request he threatens warre; and, like a prince that would be satisfied when his ambassador was dispatched, an army of 24,000 Turkes were sent into Hungary presently to destroy the Emperour's territories there. Whatt effects this ambassage will produce tyme will discover.

After a longe sidge, and muche bloode shed on ether side, Vercelli is rendered to the Spaniard by composition; the articles are honourable, as is reported. The losse of itt is a great blow to the Duke of Savoy.

Gradisco is relieved with men and victualls by the Archduke Ferdinand—I should have sayed the Kinge of Bohemia; and little hope remaines thatt the Venetians' forces will carry itt. Neverthelesse the sidge continewes.

August.

August.—The newes from Venice is thatt the Duke of Ossvna, Viceroy of Naples, hathe taken three gallies of the Venetians bound for Spalato in Dalmatia. One of them was light; the other two loaden with goodes of Jewes, Turkes, Greekes, and Armeniens, to the valew of 1,000,000 of crownes. Further itt is sayed thatt the Venetian Armada lies in the porte of Lesina, nott daringe to looke outt, although itt be composed of twelve shippes of warre, six gallyasses, and forty gallies. The Duke of Ossvna's fleet consists of eighteen gallions and thirty-three gallies. It is thought thatt the Venetians are in great danger of present rvyne, for yf the Duke of Savoy should accord to a peace with Spayne then thatt armye now employed vppon him would fall vppon the Venetian territories. The Kinge of Bohemia vexethe them with a warre in Istria, and the Duke of Ossvna lockes them vppe in the Gulphe, whereby there trade ceassethe, and succours helld from them. Neverthelesse the Count Levcinstein is now readie to embarque in the Low Countries 3,000 foote in fifteen good shippes in there ayde. God send him good successe, for the attempt is brave and honourable! The discourers say that the Venetians must be enforced to call in the Turke to there ayde, and to pay an yerelye tribute, as Ragusa dothe, for his protection, sed meliora spero.

The Kinge of France (as it is steyed) hathe bestowed vppon Mounseur de Lvines the marquisatt of Ancre, and with itt of plate, householdstufte, money, and iewells of the dead marques, to the valew of 800,000 crownes.

The Marquis Hamilton of Scotland is sworne a counseller of England. He tooke his oathe at Glasco when the Kinge was there.

In Italye there is a generall feare of the Turkes invasion in thatt territorie; to resist the same all the shippes and gallies of Spayne, Cicilie, and Malta, are assembled in the mouthe of the Gulphe of Venice, and the fleet which the Duke of Ossvna hathe there to annoy the Venetians are vnder the ensigne of the Kinge of Bohemia; for the Kinge of Spayne makes no overt warre agaynst them; but his shippes, mariners, souldiars, and treasure are exposed in thatt employment.

The Duke of Newbourge,^a the pretender to Cleve and Juliers, banishethe all Callvynists and Lutherans out of his territorye in the Palatinatt, and admitts of none other then Romishe Papists. His subiects which continew in there religion sell there patrimonies and vndergoe exile.

The Venetians are in great feare of the Spanishe armada, which daylie encrease the; and they are so straightened as hardlye any succours, ether by land or sea, cane come vnto them.

It is reported thatt the Emperour, the Kinge of Bohemia, the Elector of Collogne, and the Duke of Saxe, have agreed vppon an enterview att Moraco in Baviera, where a consultation will be held for the electinge of a Kinge of the Romans, which in all likelihood will fall vpon the Kinge of Bohemia.

Of late there hath bene an embargue in Spayne of more then fifty Holland shippes, and vpon complaynt vnto the States Generall they sent an expresse messendger, to the Archduke lettinge him to vnderstand thatt yf he did nott presentlye procure there discharge, and full satisfaction for all there damages, thatt they would right themselves vpon the Kinge of Spaynes subiects. Whatt this is like to produce you may easilye iudge.

The Ambassador of Savoy, who came to negociatt a league betwene the Vnited Provinces and his master, is retourned to the Duke, and hath obtayned of the States assurance of ayde in money, but the alliance is protracted vntil they see whether the Duke (Vercelli beinge left) will persevere in the warre, for itt is sayed thatt now the Kinge of Spayne is inclined to a peace, and offers fayrer conditions than ever he did. The feare the Venetians have of a peace in Savoy troubles them infinitlye, for in all likelihood the armye now imployed in Piemont will be turned vpon them.

Frome Gvinea and Angola two Holland shippes are latelye arrived att Amsterdam exceedinge richlye loaden, especially with copper, which mettall, before this tyme, I never heard to be in those parts.

The faction about religion in the Vnited Provinces daylye encreaseth; itt is feared thatt yll consequences will ensue.

Raleghe's expedition.

Sir Walter Raleghe was first by fowle wether enforced to put into Fallmouthe; after thatt, beinge 40 leagues cleare offe the coast, of England in his course to the southward, was by force of wether driven into the haven of Corke, in Irland, and in the storme one of his pinnaces was oversett with a sayle and lost in his sight.

Foreign news.

Vpon the succouringe of Gradisca with men, munition, and victuall, the Venetians rose frome the siedge, which continewed longe, many men lost before itt, and the Venetians consumed an infinitt masse of treasure in the enterprise. Gradisca is seated vpon the River of Lizonzo, in Frivli; the other side of the river is the vttermost towne of the Kinge of Bohemia's territorie.*

Frome all parts of Evrope intelligences concurre thatt the Kinge of Spayne hath promised the Infanta (which the world supposed thatt he had resolved to have sent into England to be our Prince's wife,) vnto the King of Bohemia's sonne, his cosen and brother-in-law, but vntill we heare frome our ambassador or agent in Spayne the truthe will nott appeare.

Mareschall de Digueres is gone into Piemont with 8,000 foote and 1,200 horse; the horse is comanded by the Count d'Avvergne, and the Duke of Rohan goes a voluntier in the armye: there is allso gone into Piemont, in the ayde of the Duke of Savoy, 3,000 Swisse of the Canton of Bearne, but Vercelli was lost before there arrivall.

Her sister Frances was twice married, first to Sir George St. Paul, of Snarford, and secondly to Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick. Chamberlain, writing on 11th October, 1617, says, "The Lord Rich is said to be in great perplexity, or rather crazed in brain, to see himself overreached by his wife, who hath so conveyed her estate that he is little or nothing the better for her, and, if she outlive him, likely to carry away a great part of his. Her sister, the Lady Bowes, hath dealt clean contrary, being lately married to the Lord Darcy of the North, and being a great estate, whole and entire, and refusing any jointure or other advantage, saying it is sufficient for her to have the honour without any hindrance to the house."—Birch, ii. 37.

In the following March he was at Tivoli, and afterwards he proceeded to Naples, where he is said to have died on the 27th of June, 1618. We find, however, that there was a brief in a cause between the Attorney General and him relative to some lands at Walthamstow in November of that year (S.P.O. vol. ccij. 20), and there was a rumour that he was alive as late as March 1623 (S.P.O. vol. cxxxix. 64.)

In August last great difference hath fallen out betwene Sir Difference between Sir Edward and Lady Coke. Edward Cooke and his wife the Ladye Elisabeth Hatton, about the marriage of Fraunces Cooke, there yongest daughter, vnto Sir John Villiers, the father consentinge vnto itt, and the mother opposite. The Lords of the Councell have bene often troubled with complaynts on ether side. The yonge gentlewoman was stolen away by her mother; Sir Edward Cooke recovered her agayne; vppon complaynte of the mother she was sequestered to one of the Clarkes of the Counsell's house, but by lettres frome his Majestie delivered to her father. The Ladye Hatton, as is sayed, endeavoured to have taken the mayde by force frome her father, for the which she was comitted prisoner to an alderman's house in London; but att Windesor the gentlewoman in the presence of the Kinge was formallye and legallie contracted vnto Sir John Villiers, the Ladye

in Savoy.

After longe debatinges about a peace betwene Spayne and Savoy, and when the intelligence in all parts was divulged thatt the peace was concluded, itt soddaynlye brake off. The Duke of Savoy presentlye marched into Montferratt, where he hathe taken one of the best townes in itt, and in the Duchye of Myllan he hathe taken two small townes; himsellfe commands one armye, and the prince his sonne another, with whom the Mareshall Digueres with his Frenche is ioyned. The same goes thatt they have an intention to beseege Novara and Alexandria, two great citties garrized by the Spaniards.

God, I hope, will never permitt him to retourne, for I conceive him to be a limme of the divell and fitter to end his cursed lyfe amonge Infidells then Christians. Forgeve my misfortune, for itt afflicts me more than you can imagine, and I thanke you for relatinge his villanies vnto me in a privatt lettre, for I am ashamed to have itt knowne thatt I did preferre him vnto you. As for his vnkle I do assure you (vppon my faythe) thatt he holds him in no lesse detestation then I do, and I am sorrye with all my harte thatt he was nott hanged by the Kinge or you when his fillthenesse and treasons towards you were manifested.

Let me entreat you to be carefull to make the mappe of the Mogolls territorie as you have intended; itt will be a worke worthye of your sellfe, and adorne your travell and iudgement, and leave to the world a lastinge memorie when you are dust. And also to gett the storye of thatt countrie to be translated, which in your relation you say was offred to you by an old gentleman, the new Governour of Syndv; the man I meane is he thatt feasted you in one of the Kinges houses. I conceive thatt some Dutch, Portugaye, or Italian inhabitant may be found to do itt, or, yf you fayle of suche, yf you may gett some Persian to translate itt into his language, English marchants will be found to putt itt into Englishe.

I do nott a little admyre of the greatnes of thatt monarque; the description you make of the riches which you saw when he left Adsmere exceedes all the reports thatt ever I read of, and yet I observe (in your discourse) more basenes in thatt prince and people then canne be imagined where suche abvndance of earthlye treasures are found.

The lettre you mention sent vnto me in your pacquett overland miscaried. I never received any suche, and yett I was very diligent to seeke after itt, concevinge thatt you had remembered me as well as you did other of your friends. Thatt pacquett was sent from Aleppo to Constantinople, there opened by the ambassador, and all the lettres were delivered to Mr. Porye, who brought them into England: he assures me there was nott any directed vnto me, and Sir Thomas Smythe (in like manner) protested the same after the pacquet came into his hands, so as I know nott where to lay the fault, and yet I amme sure there hath beene some trouperye vsed.

Vnto me of your retourne you write nothinge, neuerthesse I thinke as soone as this shippinge shall come vnto you you will be the messendger of your owne healthe, whiche I wishe with my hart; for your tyme spent amonge infidells hath bene sufficient, yf not too muche.

In my last^a vnto you I touched of a relation made by a frier of his journey from Lahor by caravan vnto Paequin or Cambalu in China, and also I discoursed somewhat of the rivers of Indus and Ob, of which rivers I do thinke you shall do well to informe your selffe, for the distance betwene them is nott muche, and they are bothe of them great and navigable.

Vppon Christmas day the mariage betwene Mrs. Francis Cooke and Sir John Villiers was solemnised att Hampton Court: the bride was led to the chapple by the Prince and the Erle of Buckingham, and his Majestie did geve her. Religious distractions in Hol-

October.—The faction in the Vnited Provinces about ecclesiastique conformitie workes a great distraction in those parts, some of the townes professing themselves Arminians, wherein they are so violent as itt is like to produce fearefull events. Barnevault is an obstinatt Arminian, and, havinge bene latelye sent for by the Estats Generall to come to the Haghe, he hath refused to obey the summons, wherevppon he is heldd in great suspition; and, whereas one of his sonnes was Governour of Bergen ap Zome, the States in their providence have ioyned a joint commander in thatt government with him. Many of the townes in Holland and ellswhere, for their better securitie in this increasinge distraction, att the proper towne chardges, have erected companies for their saftie. The townes of Rotterdam, Leyven, Harlem, Tergaw, and sundrye others, as Vtrecht, &c., do apparantlye professè themselves to be Arminians. To vphold the reformed Church, prince Mavrice resorts to sermons more then accustomed, and to suppress the fire kindled he iourneys to all the places most suspected, to put good gwards vpon them. These deuisions, vnlesse God in his mercye prevent itt, will shortly breake out into open combustions, and open a fayrre way for the Pope and Spayne.

The Turkishe piratts have this sommer beene vpon the coastes of Turkish pirates. England and Irland; but they have done no hurte, allthoughe itt was in there power, for betwene Vshant and Syllye they mett with fishermen and barques loaden with fishe, of whom they bought commodities, payinge for them more then the wares was worthe, whiche makes me to conceve thatt this yere they came but to discover and view the coaste; but hereafter this, I amme afrayd, we shall have to much of there custome and lesse civillitie. Latelye these circumcised piratts, nott farre frome the Northe Cape of Spayne, tooke three Spanishe shippes bound for France. Itt is sayed thatt in them of readie money there was above the some of 60,000^{li} sterlinge.

Affairs of Poland and Russia.

The Kinge of Poland workes all the meanes he may to grow to a pacification with the Turke to geve his sonne the prince a fayre way to accommodate the affayres of Moscovie, betwene whome and the now Emperor of Russia there is a treatie for surrenderinge his estate to the prince. The Emperor, as itt seemes, is wearye of thatt government, and is contented to resigne the same, so as he may have other possessions transferred vppon him, whereby he may live in the qualitie of a prince. He likewise desires thatt his father, who is a prisoner in Polonia, may be enlarged and sent home. To prosscute this busines the prince is nott slow, havinge allreadie raysed 60,000 souldiards to passe into Moscovia.

Affairs of Germany.

It is reported that shortlye a diet will be held att Ratisbone for the election of a Kinge of Romans.

The Kinge of Sweeden, with 22,000 in his armye, lies still before Riga, and the towne is reduced to suche extremities as itt cannott longe holdd out: the Kinge of Poland hathe attempted to relieve itt bothe by land and sea, but he fayled in ether, his land companies beinge defeated, and 5 of his shippes, loaden with munitions and other provisions, taken.

The Kinge attempted to take the towne of Pernav in Liffland, but fayled in the enterprise.

The plague att Collen, Munster, Amsterdam, and especiallie in the townes of Hennallt and Arthois, daylye encreaseth and spred ittselfe almost all over the Lower Germanie.

Great levies of men are made in Germanye, as well by the Emperor and the Kinge of Bohemia as by the Electours spirituall and temporall, and by all the rest of the princes of either religion. Whatt will be the event of these preparations, or to whatt end they are made, is yett vnknowne, every man havinge his particular censure. The Archduke in his territories dothe the like, and the Vnited Provinces strengthen there frontiers, havinge also geven forthe there commandments thatt all suche as are intertayned by them shall be in a readines to draw into the fylde as occasion shall require.

The territories of Collen, Treves, and Ivilliers are extremelye ^{Plague of rats.} afflicted with innumerable troopes of ratts, which devoure all the frutes, as well housed as growinge in the gardens and fillds, and especially the vines are destroyed by them, so thatt great dearthe is feared to ensue in those parts, and besides itt is holld for an yll preassage of future calamitie.

The treatie of peace betwene Spayne and Savoy is renewed ^{The war in Italy.} agayne, and the Kinge of Spayne, now att the last, is contented to confirm the conditions agreed vppon att Asti, which, as I remember, was published before your departure out of England; but betwene the last treatie, which soddenlye brake of, and this which I now speake of, the Duke of Savoy hathe bene victorious, havinge in this interim taken fyve stronge places frome the Spaniard, 14 ensignes, and slayne and taken of his enemies above 4500.

Of the Prince of Condies enlargement there is lesse hope then ever; he is still prisoner in Bois de Vincennes, gvarded by 600 souldiars of the continued regiments, who are comanded by Monsieur Cadenet, a brother to the favorite de Lvynes.

There is great workinge in France for the recallinge of the ^{French news.} Queene Mother to the court, but the Kinge geves a deaf eare vnto itt.

Of late a gentleman, an ordinarie attendant vppon the Frenche Kinge, as the Kinge was goinge to the duke of Vendosmes house to christen his child, advised his Majestic to take good care of himsellfe, for thatt the duke had a purpose to poyson hym, wherevppon the Kinge retourned, to the great amazement of the duke and all others: thatt done, he went to the Duke and told him thatt the Kinge was advertised thatt he should have bene poysoned by him, and therefore he wished him to preserve his life by present flight, for the Kinge had a purpose to seeze vppon his person: the Duke's innocencye bred confidence in him, and would nott bouge. The Kinge and his counsayle were different in opinion whether vppon the information the Duke should be arrested, but in the end, because in him there appeared no apparence of feare, his arrest was differred. The gentleman, seeinge thatt his practize did not succeed as he had imagined, bent his mallice agaynst Vendosme, and to make good his information to the Kinge, he practised with three or four others of the souldiards of the gvardes, who confirmed his accusation, but one of these conspirators revealed the plott to the Duke, who presentlye went to the Kinge, and, the matter beinge called into examination, the practize agaynst Vendosme evidentlye appeared, wherevppon the gentleman thatt had framed this impious fallshood was publiquelye executed.

In Paris a grooms of the Marques de Rosny his chamber, beinge broken vppon the wheele for a rape, voluntarylye confessed, but how trulye I knowe nott, thatt his master the Marques had practised with him for the poysoninge of his wife, who is Monsieur de Crecqui his daughter, and thatt a burgesses wife in Paris, whome the Marques loved, should do as moche for her husband, and then, beinge on ether part free, a marriage betwene them was agreed vppon. Whether this report be trew or fallse, itt is a misfortune for the Marques to have suche a scandell cast vppon him, and itt will be the more easilie beleevd, because betweene him and his wife there is no very good agreement. The Duke of Svly, his fater, is muche afflicted with itt.

No. I.

Black Oliver St. John (p. 11.)

THE identity of this person is involved in obscurity. We know but little relating to him. The proceedings on his trial are not recorded, with the exception of the speech of Lord Bacon on the prosecution, which is printed in Howell's State Trials, ii. 899, wherein he describes him as a gentleman of ancient house and name, and as being a principal person and a dweller in that town (Marlborough), and one whom the mayor considered likely to give both money and good example.

Lord Campbell supposes him to be the same Oliver St. John who in the reign of Charles I. was one of the prominent leaders of the republican party in the House of Commons, and who, in 1640, was made Solicitor-General and afterwards Lord Chief Justice. Clarendon states of the latter (book iii. 186) that he "was a lawyer of Lincoln's Inn, reserved and of a dark and clouded countenance,* very proud, and conversing with very few, and those men of his own humour and inclinations. He had been questioned, committed, and brought into the Star Chamber many years before, with other persons of great name and reputation (which first brought his name on the stage), for communicating some paper among themselves, which some men at that time had a mind to have extended to a design of sedition, but, it being quickly evident that the prosecution would not be attended with success, they were all shortly after discharged."

Lord Campbell was probably misled by the close similarity of the character, as here given, of St. John, the future Lord Chief Justice, to that of the gentleman mentioned in the text, although the historical part of the narrative does not agree with the case of the latter, in which the prosecution was quite successful. Mr. Foss, however, clearly proves his Lordship to be mistaken, by showing that the Oliver St. John who became Lord Chief Justice was born about the year 1598, and that he was admitted a pensioner of Queen's College, Cambridge, on Aug. 16, 1615, being then seventeen years of age. It is highly improbable that the letter to the Mayor of Marlborough* was written by such a youth, or that the prosecution of a mere boy would have created such anxiety at court as to cause, at the request of the Council,† the trial to be deferred until the Lord Chancellor (Egerton), who from age and infirmity was upon the point of resigning the great seal, could attend the hearing, "so necessary" did they "judg his presence there." The statement of Mr. Foss is confirmed by the will of Oliver St. John of Cayshoe, co. Beds, which proves the parentage of the Lord Chief Justice, and shows that in 1625 he was still a student in London. Mr. Foss falls into a still more remarkable error himself by stating, upon the authority of Harris's Lives, that Black Oliver mentioned in the text was Oliver St. John of Lydiard Tregoze, who in 1622 was created Lord Grandison. The printed genealogical accounts which we have of this gentleman certainly state that in his youth "he was sent to study the law in the Inns of Court, but having been engaged in a duel he was obliged to quit the kingdom." He served in the Low Countries under the Veres, and was knighted in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. He afterwards distinguished himself in the wars in Ireland, and in December 1605 was made Master of the Ordnance in that kingdom, which office he continued to hold until 1616. He thus spent the early part of the reign of James I. in that country, and we find him taking an active part in the debates in the Irish House of Commons in 1613 and 1614. In 1615 he seems to have been in England, but not in disgrace, for in October of that year he was so much in the confidence of the King as to be entrusted with the custody of the Earl of Somerset, and in the following April he was appointed Lord Deputy of Ireland. He could not, therefore, be the same person who was prosecuted and received so severe a sentence in April 1615, as Mr. St. John of Marlborough, who is no-where spoken of as a Knight.

* A swarthy complexion seems to have been hereditary in this family. Leland, Itinerary, vi. 27, speaking of "Olyver Saynt John, sonne to the excellent duchesse of Somerset" (as he is designated in his will, printed in Nicolas's Testamenta Vetusta, and in Jacob's Peerage, and which will is dated in 1496), describes him as "a blak and big felow that died at Fonterabye in Spayne, when the late Marquise of Dorset was there." This Oliver was the founder of the family of Lydiard Tregoze.

Having disposed of the claims advanced for these two gentlemen, it remains to be considered who was "Black Oliver St. John," who on 11 October, 1614, wrote the letter to the Mayor of Marlborough. Chamberlain calls him "Oliver St. John of Wiltshire." He was therefore in all probability of the Lydiard stock, and, on turning to the pedigree of that branch of St. John, recorded in the Heralds' College, we find that John St. John of Lydiard had two sons,

* The original letter, written in a legal hand, is in the S. P. O. vol. lxviii. 23.

† Privy Council Register.—S. P. O. Dom. Corr. James I. vol. lxxx. 24.

John, the grandfather of Oliver who became Lord Grandison, and Oliver, who had a son of his own name, described as "son and heir."

The elder Oliver is stated by Edmonson, iv. 328, to have married Margaret, daughter and coheir of — Love, of Winchelsea, and to have had three sons: Oliver, Nicholas, and John. This statement is confirmed by the following document among the title-deeds of an estate called Troppinden, in Sussex, preserved among the Evidences of George E. Courthope, of Whilegh, in that county, Esq. by whom it has been kindly communicated.

"Sir Edward Randyll, Knt. and Dame Anne his wife, by Ind're 10 May, 6 Jas. did sell unto Thomas Risly of Brencley the moiety of all these lands and tenements.

[The preamble of the said Indenture is as follows: Between Sir Edward Randill, of Albury, co. Surry, Knt. and dame Anne his wife, sole dau'r and heir of Anne Morgan, dec^d, late wife of Sir John Morgan, Knt. and one of the dau's and heirs of John Love, late of Winchelsey, co. Sussex, Gent.]

"Olyver St.John, Esq. by Ind're same date, did sell the other moiety to said Thomas Risley.

[The preamble of the said Indenture is as follows: Nicholas St.John, Gent. one of the sons of Olyver St.John, Esq. and of Margaret his wife, one of the dau'rs of John Love, dec^d, late of Winchelsey, Merchant.]

"Thomas Risly, by will, 6 Feb. 1612, gives all s^d lands to Symon Bynyor, who sold the same to Stephen Ballard and Richard Besbeece.

"Richard Besbeece hath the custody of all the ancient writings.

"John Love,* of Winchelsey, dec^d, was owner of these premises, and he had issue 2 dau'rs, viz^t. Margaret, who married to the said Oliver St.John, and another to Sir John Morgan, Knt. and died leaving issue only the said Ann, wife of the a^l^d Sir Edward Randyll.

"Margaret died leaving issue Nicholas St.John, Oliver St.John, and John St. John, for whom their father hath undertaken that they shall release, or else there is a lease for 1000 y'rs for security.

"Nicholas St. John hath already released.

"The other two brothers be not of age †

" RICHARD BESBEECH."

* He made his will, dated 26 Mar. 1593; names "son St. John and Margaret my dau'r his wife, all lands, &c."—"son St. John, house he now lives in in Winchilsea—"son Morgan, house in Winchilsea," &c. After his decease to "Anne Morgan, his dau'r begotten on Anne Love deceased, late dau'r of me the said John Love."

† A subsequent Indenture, dated 5 May, 13 Jas. (1615), shows that Oliver and John St. John were still under age, and that their father Oliver was living at Marlborough, co. Wilts, and their mother was dead.

It appears from this document that Oliver St. John and Margaret Love were married before 1593, when John Love made his will, in all probability just previous to that date, for in 1612 Oliver St. John's eldest son was of age, and the two younger were yet minors in 1615. In 1593 he resided at Winchelsea. How soon afterwards he settled at Marlborough we have no evidence to show, but we find his name, as an inhabitant of that town, in an armoury book preserved in the corporation chest of the date of 1606; and the register of burials of the parish of St. Mary shows that—

“Margaret, wife of Oliver St. John, gent. (was) buried Sept. 19th, 1606.”

This entry agrees with the statement in the Indenture of 5 May, 13 Jas. that the mother of his three sons was dead. After the death of this wife he seems to have re-married, for the register above quoted records that—

“Mrs. St. John, wife of Mr. Oliver St. John (was) buried April 3rd, 1608.”

In the “Taxation of the Freeholders of the Borough, and Out-dwellers holding freeholds, for aid-money to marry the Princess Elizabeth,” his name does not appear. This, however, was the benevolence against which he wrote, and as it was regarded as a free gift, the names of the contributors, only, would be recorded. The above document shows that he was a resident in Marlborough in 1615. We have no evidence of the date when he died, but the will of an Oliver St. John is recorded in the registers of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in the year 1639, although, unfortunately, as stated in a marginal note in the volume, neither the original nor any copy can be found. No trace of his burial is found in the Marlborough registers.

If, therefore, we can regard Edmonson as correct in stating that Oliver, the second son of John St. John of Lydiard, was the husband of the daughter of — Love, of Winchelsea, there can be no reasonable cause to doubt his identity with “Black Oliver.” Only one discrepancy remains to be disposed of. Both Edmonson and the Visitation Pedigree of 1623 show Oliver as the “son and heir” of Oliver St. John, by Margaret Love. This can only be reconciled by supposing that Nicholas, who is proved by the above document to have been his eldest son, died between 1612, when he released his interest in Troppinden, and 1623.

No. II.

The goodlye manour of Shirborne (p. 48.)

Chamberlain says that Sherborne was at first given to Villiers, but he resigned it. "In the meanwhile it is bestowed upon Sir John Digby, which, besides the goodly house and other commodities, is presently worth 800*l.* a year, and in reasonable time will be double. I cannot yet learn how or why this good fortune is befallen him, but sure it is somewhat extraordinary." (Birch, i. 426.) Castle says that "Villiers refused it in a most noble fashion, praying the King that the building of his fortunes may not be founded upon the ruins of another."

This disinterestedness on the part of a royal favourite is somewhat remarkable, and was not manifested by Villiers in his other large acquisitions. We may, therefore, look for some other cause than that assigned, and such cause is probably shown by the following curious contemporary document preserved in the State Paper Office, and recently printed by Mr. Noel Sainsbury in the Literary Gazette :—

"An inevitable curse by a Norman bishopp to all succeeding times, as appeareth following :

"Osmund, a Norman knight, almost 600 yeares sithence, com'ing into this cuntry wth Will'm the Conqueror, became afterwards Earle of Dorsett, and, being a godlie man, forsooke the earledome and became Bishopp of Salisburie, and gave the lands called Sherborne, thereto adioyning, to remaine to that sea for ever, wth addic'on of a curse to such as should take it from the b'ppricke in greate or small things, not onlie in this world, but in the world to come, unless he made restitution in his life time.*

"This Osmund was afterwards canonized a saint, and it happened afterwards that King Stephen tooke from a B'pp of the same sea, called Roger the Riche, the said lands, who after, during his life, had but a troublesome raigne; another being his competitor in the kingdome, who at length succeeded him in the whole, had those lands, but enjoyed them not longe.

"Theis lands afterwards came to the possession of the house of the Mountagues, Earles of Salisburie, whereof one was slaine, being defending Towers in Franunce; another alsoe was taken prisoner there; and then another bishopp, called Robt Wymell, brought a writt of right ag^t Will'm Montague, Earl of

* Osmund de Seez died 1099.

Salisbury, for theis lands; the trial being by combate, and the champions readie to fight, the King E. 3 tooke up the quarrell for 2000 mks., and soe the b'pp had theis lands againe, and there they rested vntill E. 6 time, when the Duke of Som'sett had these lands, and he noe sooner gott them but hee fell, and afterwards lost his head.

“ ‘Afterwards B'pp Capon* exhibited a bill in Chancerie, p'tending the Duke, as Protector, had gotten the lands from him by threats; and thereupon, by decree in Chancerie, they came back againe to the B'ppricke.

“ ‘And in 34 Eliz. S^r Walter Raleigh gott theis lands, who p'sentlie after fell into her Ma^{ty}s dislike, and afterwards hee fell from that to what he now is; then Prince Henry gott them, but enioyed them but a small time, to the great grief of all the world that lost him soe soon.

“ ‘And now lastlie, the Earl of Somersett hadd those lands, whose fall is much feared to be greate.’ ”

Sir John Digby was not more fortunate than his predecessors in the possession of this estate. At the time he received it he stood high in the favour of his sovereign, who showered upon him numerous honours; but within a very short time he was crushed by his rival Buckingham, and cast into prison. After his release he lived in seclusion until the commencement of the troubles of the succeeding reign. At first he put himself forward as a leader of the popular party, but deserting that cause, and adhering to the King, he incurred their implacable hatred. He was obliged to retire into France; all his property was seized by the Parliament, for which he was not permitted, like other Royalists, to compound. He died in exile 16 Jan. 1652-3, and was succeeded by his son George, K.G. who had been summoned to parliament in his father's lifetime by writ as Baron Digby, 9 June, 1641; and he, upon the restoration of Charles II., received back his estates, but, having changed his religion whilst abroad, was incapable of holding any office. He died 20 March, 1676, leaving one surviving son, who succeeded him as third Earl of Bristol, but died 1698 without issue, when all his honours became extinct. The manor now devolved upon William fifth Lord Digby in the Irish peerage. But the curse seems still to cling to it. This nobleman had five sons and seven daughters. His three eldest sons and four daughters died unmarried, and his fourth son died during his father's life. Lord Digby died Nov. 1752, and was succeeded by his grandson, Edward, eldest son of his fourth son. Edward died unmarried 27 Nov. 1757, and was succeeded by his brother Henry, created Earl Digby and Viscount Coleshill. Henry was twice married. By his first wife he had an only child Edward, who died in infancy. By his second wife he had four sons and two daughters, of whom one son and one daughter died young, and another son without issue. He died 25 Sept. 1793, and was succeeded by his son Edward, second Earl, who died unmarried 11 May, 1856, when the dignities of Earl Digby and Viscount Coleshill became extinct; but he was succeeded in the title of Baron Digby of Sherborne in the peerage of Great Britain, created in 1765, by his cousin the present Lord Digby.
